SYDNEY'S TOP 10

TOP 10 Sydney's Highlights

Sydney is blessed with stunning ocean beaches, magnificent national parks and a wonderful subtropical climate that makes the great outdoors irresistible to its four million inhabitants. The Eora people, the Aborigines who settled around Sydney Harbour, arrived approximately 50,000 years ago, while the earliest white settlers arrived in 1788. Free settlers soon followed in the wake of the First Fleet of transported convicts, and after them several waves of migrants seeking a new life. Now, over two centuries later, the once far-flung penal colony has matured into a culturally diverse, tolerant and mesmerising city. Ideally located on the world's most beautiful harbour, Sydney is as exciting and bustling as it is laid back and relaxing.

1 Sydney Opera House
Sydney's architectural icon and world-renowned performing arts venue enjoys the most spectacular setting of any cultural institution in the world. It is the city's most popular tourist attraction (see pp8–11).

2 Sydney Harbour Bridge
This enormous and beautiful structure was an economic and engineering triumph. It reshaped Sydney's landscape and lifted the city's spirits during the dark days of the Great Depression (see pp12–13).

3 Sydney Harbour
From its pristine beaches to its working docklands, this deep-water port at the heart of this maritime city is the world's finest (see pp14–17).

4 The Rocks & Circular Quay
Governor Phillip and the First Fleet arrived here in 1788 to lay the foundations for Australia's white settlement. Now it's an engaging historic precinct and a lively transport hub (see pp18–19).

5 Royal Botanic Gardens & The Domain
This lovely green belt east of the city centre incorporates the Royal Botanic Gardens and the Art Gallery of New South Wales, and has been one of Sydney's best-loved public spaces for almost 200 years (see pp20–23).

6 Art Gallery of New South Wales
Boasting one of the country's most extensive collections of Australian and international art, this striking building in The Domain is not to be missed (see pp24–7).

7 Darling Harbour & Chinatown
Chinatown's authentic bustle and flavour is the perfect counterpoint to the ritzy Darling Harbour precinct. An extension of the city centre, Darling Harbour offers numerous museums, bars, cafés and tourist attractions (see pp28–9).

8 Powerhouse Museum
Kooky. Challenging. Hands-on. And plenty of fun. Powerhouse's eclectic and sometimes eccentric science and design collection appeals to children and adults alike (see pp30–31).

9 Taronga Zoo
The zoo's collection of Australian and exotic animals, not to mention its gorgeous setting overlooking the harbour, makes it a must-see destination for visitors (see pp32–3).

10 Bondi Beach
Sydney's swimmers, surfers and sybarites all love Australia's most iconic beach. Don't leave the city without spending some time here, body surfing, walking along the clifftops or working on your tan (see pp34–5).

TOP 10 Sydney Opera House

The Opera House's magnificent harbourside location, stunning architecture and excellent programme of events make it Sydney's number one destination. The modern masterpiece reflects the genius of its 1966 architect, Jørn Utzon. In 1999, Utzon agreed to prepare a guide of design principles for future changes to the building. This was welcome news for all who marvel at his masterpiece and for the four million visitors to the site each year.

1 Roof
Comprised of 10 "sails", the roof (above) is made of over one million tiles. Designed to counter the sunlight, the ceramic tiles take on a lustrous glow at dawn and dusk.

2 Concert Hall
The Opera House's most impressive venue, and home to the Sydney Symphony, seats 2,679 and hosts concerts, opera (right) and drama performances. Its acoustics are acclaimed worldwide, and the Grand Organ took ten years to design and tune.

3 Opera Theatre
Home to The Australian Ballet, the Sydney Dance Company and Opera Australia, this lovely theatre (above) seats more than 1,500. It hosted the site's first performance in 1973, Prokofiev's War and Peace.

Opera House and the Bridge

4 Drama Theatre
This intimate theatre was not part of Utzon's original plan. Today, however, it is a much-loved venue and its size ensures good sightlines from every seat.

8 Forecourt & Monumental Steps

Framed by the Botanic Gardens and Government House, the Forecourt and the 86-m (282-ft) wide Monumental Steps (left) are the perfect setting for outdoor events, such as ballroom dancing or Greek folk music. A weekly arts and crafts market is also held here.

5 Playhouse

This intimate venue hosts contemporary theatre productions and the popular 'Kids at the House' programme.

10 Bars & Restaurants

Dining at Sydney Opera House caters for all tastes, from cocktails at the Opera Bar and light meals at the Sidewalk Café, Studio Café or Café West to a night of indulgence at the award-winning Guillaume at Bennelong (see below & p58).

6 The Studio

The Opera House's grooviest and most flexible venue is The Studio. Staged here are contemporary short-run productions that include gay cabaret, hip-hop theatre, world music and country and western. Comedy and dance shows are also held here.

7 High Tea

High Tea (left) combines a 20-minute opera recital by some of the world's greatest opera singers with cuisine prepared by renowned chef Guillaume Brahimi, in the intimate Bennelong restaurant. High Tea at the Opera House takes place every Wednesday 2–4pm.

9 Northern Foyers

Topaz-tinted glass canopies and massive girders enclose the Northern Foyers of the Concert Hall and Opera Theatre, and offer spectacular 180-degree views of the harbour.

Bennelong

Governor Arthur Phillip built a home on the headland for his Aboriginal translator, Bennelong, and in 1792 Phillip took Bennelong back to London with him. When Bennelong returned to Australia in 1795 he found himself caught between cultures, and his drinking, womanising and violent outbursts became legendary, ending tragically in 1813. In 1817 a fort designed by Francis Greenway was built on the point named for Bennelong. It was replaced by a tram depot in 1902.

The arts and crafts market at the Forecourt is held every Sunday from 9am–4pm, subject to weather.

TOP 10 Raising the Roof

1 1954

Eugene Goosens, the Conservatorium of Music's director, lobbies the state Labour Premier, Joseph Cahill, to construct an opera house. Cahill appoints Goosens to a committee investigating the proposal.

2 1956

Upon his return from an overseas conducting tour, customs agents mysteriously find "pornography" in Sir Eugene's luggage. He resigns and returns to Europe leaving an overwrought and self-righteous media frenzy in his wake.

3 1957

A Danish architect, Jørn Utzon, is declared the project's architect. Utzon's prize money is £5,000. Projected cost of the project: $7 million. Projected completion date: 1963.

4 1958

Demolition of the old tram sheds on Bennelong Point commences. Following an unsuccessful fund-raising venture, the government establishes the Opera House Lottery to cover the estimated costs of construction.

5 1959

Premier Cahill responds to public and media concern about project delays and rising costs. He insists that work commence. Utzon and the project engineer

Ove Arup protest, asserting their plans are incomplete. Cahill dies in October 1959. Work starts on the platform (Stage 1).

6 1960-62

Utzon resolves the dilemma of the roof's design and construction in 1961. Sir Eugene Goosens dies in 1962.

7 1963-65

Work starts on the roof (Stage 2). In 1965 a Liberal/Country Party Coalition elected to office promises to stem rising costs and construction delays.

8 1966

On 28 February, Utzon resigns after disputes with the government over designs, deadlines, fees, subcontractors, and his role as the architect. A 1,000 people march on state Parliament demanding his reinstatement. Four Australian architects are appointed to complete the project. Utzon leaves Australia.

9 1966-1973

The Northern Foyers, interiors, walkways and concourse are completed (Stage 3).

10 1973

At the Forecourt on 20 October 1973, Queen Elizabeth II formally declares the Sydney Opera House open. Final cost: $102 million. Final project duration: 14 years.

- 9 2003: Protesters daub "No War" on the roof in protest at Australia's involvement in Iraq.
- 10 2006: Queen Elizabeth II opens the Colonnade, the first exterior change to the building.

Designing the House

Jørn Utzon

Inspired by the fan-like ribs of a palm leaf, Utzon's intention was to construct a timeless, organic structure with an ascetic exterior that defied convention. The roof "shells" were to float above the harbour like giant sails. Utzon's drawings were inspired, but didn't allow for cost-effective prefabrication. In partnership with the engineering firm Ove Arup & Partners, Utzon laboured for months over the issue. His elegant epiphany came in 1961. If the shells were all cast from the same sphere, thus sharing a radius, it would be possible to pre-cast the concrete ribs as segments which could then be later assembled. Work began on the roof in 1963 and, in 2003, Utzon's genius was recognised by the architecture world's equivalent of the Nobel Prize, the Pritzker Prize. Following Utzon's death in 2008, a State memorial was held in the Concert Hall.

Utzon's Opera House Model

Utzon's original interiors and certain design features now only exist in model form. The architect donated his models and plans to the State Library of New South Wales (see p22).

TOP 10 Sydney Harbour Bridge

Nothing you've ever seen can prepare you for the size and surprising beauty of the world's largest steel arch bridge, opened in 1932. Its balanced composition and the graceful sweep of its southern approach have captivated artists for years. Francis Greenway (see p23) proposed a bridge in 1815, but the logistics vexed engineers until 1911, when John Bradfield suggested a single-span bridge. By then North Shore's rapid growth demanded a solution, the only alternative being a long road trip through the western suburbs. Most visitors can easily understand why Sydneysiders love their old "coathanger".

1 Design
Engineer John Bradfield established the design parameters, completed by Dorman Long & Co. Sir John Burnet and Partners of London designed the decorative granite-clad Art Deco pylons.

2 BridgeClimb
Since BridgeClimb (above) opened for business in 1998, almost two million people have climbed the bridge. The 3.5-hour guided climb over the top of the arch is well organised and exhilarating, and there's no better way to appreciate the structure's enormity and beauty.

Poster for the Bridge's opening

3 Pylon Lookout & Museum
The Southeast Pylon (below) offers 360-degree spectacular bridge-top views of Sydney as well as three levels of exhibition space exploring the bridge's genesis.

➔ BridgeClimb also offer an express climb of over 2 hours and a discovery climb through the inner arch.

4 Pedestrian & Cycle Paths

Free highlights include a pedestrian and jogging path (above) along the eastern side of the bridge, and a cycle path along the western side.

6 Dawes Point

Below the southern pylons is Dawes Point, where the colony's first observatory was built in 1788. The park's interpretation boards, and the excavated remains of the fort that replaced the observatory in 1791, offer an interesting perspective on the city's development.

9 Famous Portraits

Works by renowned artists such as Grace Cossington-Smith, Dorrit Black, Gwen Barringer and Henri Mallard reflect the optimism inspired by the bridge in the midst of the Great Depression, and honour the bravery of its construction workers.

10 Memorial

During the Great Depression 1,400 people (above) worked on the bridge while hundreds more worked for subcontractors. A plaque on the southern approach commemorates the 16 workers who lost their lives during construction.

5 Bradfield Park

Under the northern pylons, this small park commemorating John Bradfield offers unparalleled views of the Opera House and Circular Quay. Directly beneath the bridge is the bow of the original HMAS Sydney.

7 Maintenance

Over $14 million and 3000 litres of paint a year are needed to keep the bridge shipshape. Before establishing himself as an actor, Paul Hogan worked as a painter on the bridge.

8 Tolls

When the bridge opened in 1932, the toll for cars was 6 pence. Horse and carts cost 3 pence and sheep and pigs were a penny per head. The current toll for vehicles (left) is $3.

"Captain" Francis de Groot

Before Premier JT Lang could cut the ceremonial ribbon at the bridge's 1932 opening, a man swept forward and slashed the ribbon. "Captain" Francis de Groot declared the bridge open in the name of "decent citizens of NSW". He belonged to the right-wing New Guard, which opposed Lang's "socialist" government and believed that only royalty should inaugurate such an achievement. He was arrested and sent to a psychiatric hospital while Lang re-cut the ribbon.

Paul Hogan's big break was the starring role in the hugely popular movie Crocodile Dundee (1986).

TOP 10 Sydney Harbour

Arguably the most beautiful harbour in the world, it took the Parramatta and Lane Cove Rivers thousands of years to carve it from the sandstone. Well protected from off-shore winds, the harbour is also remarkably deep in parts. From its working docklands to its pristine and secluded beaches, this harbour is a natural asset that most cities can only dream of. Over the last 200 years the harbour has seen vast real estate developments, now comprising a lively array of apartment buildings and large residences, each vying for vantage points of the gorgeous harbour views and bustling maritime life.

1 Sydney Harbour National Park

This remarkable national park includes 5 islands. Aboriginal rock art sites, historic buildings, secluded beaches, monuments, lookouts and bushwalks are just some of its highlights. The National Parks and Wildlife Service (NPWS) manages the park and operates several tours.

2 Harbour Beaches

Sydney's harbour beaches (below) are glorious and several have protective shark netting, including Shark Beach and Manly Cove (see p118). Parsley Bay, Camp Cove, and Lady Bay Beach in Watsons Bay are all gems and are accessible by ferry.

3 The Heads

The rugged South and North Heads (above & p51) mark the entrance to Sydney Harbour and offer magnificent ocean and harbour views. They are particularly popular on Boxing Day when crowds gather to cheer the start of the Sydney to Hobart yacht race (see p73).

4 The Islands

Of the harbour's seven islands, Sydney Harbour Federation Trust manages Cockatoo and Snapper, and the NPWS manages Goat, Shark, Clark, Rodd Fort Denison (above).

6 Harbourside Mansions & Penthouses

Among the fabulous abodes are Boomerang (see p86), built by music publisher Frank Albert, Craigend (Darling Point, owned by shipping magnate James Patrick), and Russell Crowe's penthouse at Woolloomooloo Finger Wharf (see p86).

9 The Working Harbour

View the harbour's working history at the Australian National Maritime Museum (see p42), wander Balmain's backstreets, or discover the convict and maritime history of Cockatoo Island with the Sydney Harbour Federation Trust.

10 Ferry Rides

No trip to Sydney is complete without a ferry ride (above & pp16-17). A journey to Manly is the classic trip, but other popular destinations include Watsons Bay, Balmain, Mosman and Darling Harbour.

5 Harbourside Walks

Thanks to the Harbour Foreshore Vigilance Committee (see p97), set up to retain harbourside land for public use, Sydney has great harbourside walks. Sydney Ferries' Go Walkabout booklet is a pocket-sized guide to some of the best options.

7 Harbourside Parks

While some parks offer extensive walking trails, others are lovely pockets of shaded greenery. The best parks include Rushcutters Bay (see p87), Balls Head Reserve (see p115), the Botanic Gardens (see pp20-21) and Nielson Park (see p51).

8 Harbour Wildlife

Sydney Harbour is remarkably healthy, home to rainbow lorikeets (left), several species of shark and fish, sea horses, dolphins, the occasional whale and the only known Little Penguin breeding colony on the Australian mainland.

5 Catamarans

Several gigantic catamarans service the harbour tourist trade. In some cases you can enjoy an on-board BBQ, or work on your tan as you cruise the harbour.

6 Jet Boats

If you feel the urge to "burn rubber" on the harbour, the harbour's jet boats will definitely give you an adrenaline fix.

7 Tall Ships

If they're in town, enjoy a harbour voyage on either of Sydney's two tall ships, the Svanen or the Bounty, a replica of Bligh's vessel built for the film of the same name.

8 Boats for Hire

Rent anything from sea kayaks to 14-ft (4.3-m) aluminium boats to 20-ft (6-m) half-cabin cruisers. Or hire a kayak and explore Middle Harbour.

9 Seaplane

Numerous flights around Sydney Harbour offer excellent fly-and-dine packages and can also take you to the gorgeous Northern Beaches, Pittwater and Hawkesbury regions.

10 Helicopter

For a touch of Mission Impossible, catch a helicopter for an exciting and scenic ride over the Harbour Bridge, the Opera House, Eastern Suburbs and Manly Cove.

Sailing on Sydney Harbour

Sydney Harbour is perfect for sailing, although sometimes you can't see the water for the canvas. Wednesday afternoons and weekends are popular with the more competitive old salts, especially in the the competition season which runs between September and March. Friday twilight sailing is perfect for the more laid-back yachtie. Several firms, including Sydney Harbour Escapes, hire yachts for bareboat charter and offer social sailing and sailing lessons on Fridays and Sundays. The Sailing School, Sydney by Sail, and East Sail can also teach you the ropes. Afloat is a free monthly magazine for the yachting fraternity and for those with an interest in Sydney's maritime history. It also carries a regular calendar of events, tide charts and fishing tips. Check the Crew Wanted classifieds if you fancy running away to sea; Afloat is available at all marinas and the Australian National Maritime Museum.

TOP 10 The Rocks & Circular Quay

Near Circular Quay, The Rocks is a sanitized precinct of narrow laneways, galleries, boutiques and restaurants. West of the Argyle Cut, the road cut through solid rock in the 1860s that links east with west, the area is mainly residential. The Rocks sprang up beside the Tank Stream following the First Fleet's arrival on 26 January 1788. Within days, Governor Phillip's prefabricated canvas and timber residence was erected and the convicts housed in tents beneath the sandstone outcrops that gave The Rocks its name. Nowadays the open sewers, drunken sailors, convicts, brothels and plague-ridden rats are long gone, and the area is ideal for a winding stroll and a cold ale at a historic hotel; try the Hero of Waterloo or the Lord Nelson.

Renovations of this stately 1844 building have seen the addition of a major public library. The Union Jack on Loftus Street marks the site of European landing and settlement.

3 Tank Stream

The only harbourfront reminders of the tidal creek (see p38) that determined Sydney's location are two artworks on Alfred Street. Stephen Walker's is at the western end, and Lynne Roberts-Goodwin's (see p47) is at the corner of Pitt Street.

4 George Street

Australia's oldest street is now a busy stretch of boutiques, galleries, shops and pubs. The Rocks' market (below) selling crafts, jewellery and the like is held at the northern end of the street on Saturdays and Sundays from 10am–5pm.

5 Sailors' Home
 Formed in 1859, the Sailors' Home ran until the 1970s providing cheap lodging to seamen. Home to the Billich Gallery, the building's original north wing is Romanesque Revival in design.

6 Cadman's Cottage
 Built in 1816, this is Sydney's oldest surviving dwelling (right). It contains items excavated beneath the floors and the National Park Information Centre.

7 Museum of Contemporary Art
 The cutting-edge MCA displays contemporary art from Australia and around the world (above & p44). It offers tours, exhibitions and lectures. May close intermittently in 2011 while a new wing is built.

8 Overseas Passenger Terminal

A stylish glass structure containing excellent restaurants, its 1988 renovation replaced the 1950s terminal that once accommodated passenger liners. Its views of the Opera House are unparalleled.

9 Garrison Church
 Australia's first military church is officially named Holy Trinity Church (below). Designed by Henry Ginn in 1840, it was remodelled in 1878 by Edmund Blacket, Colonial architect of the Victorian Gothic main building at Sydney University (see p103).

10 Sydney Observatory

The 1858 Italianate building (below) was converted into a museum of astronomy in 1988. The tower's time-ball still drops daily at 1 pm, while a cannon is fired simultaneously from Fort Denison (see p38).

Lieutenant William Dawes

Lieutenant Dawes established Australia's first observatory on the point that now bears his name. In 1790 he earned Governor Phillip's displeasure when he refused to join a reprisal attack against Aborigines. His refusal sprang from his relationship with a Eora woman, Patyegarang. Dawes' journals detail his conversations with Patyegarang and document the vocabulary and grammar of the Eora. Dawes was shipped out in 1791 and spent years campaigning against slavery in the West Indies.

TOP 10 Royal Botanic Gardens & The Domain

Located around Farm Cove on the shore of Sydney Harbour is the spectacular Royal Botanic Gardens and Domain. Established in 1816, this oasis in the heart of the city occupies the land on which the first crops were planted. Australia's oldest scientific institution is home to an impressive collection of native and exotic plants and trees. The grounds also house an art gallery and music school.

1 Mrs Macquarie's Chair
This sandstone bench (above) was carved in 1816 for the governor's wife, Elizabeth Macquarie. The landmark offers breathtaking views of the Opera House, Harbour Bridge and Fort Denison.

2 Andrew "Boy" Charlton Pool
Named for a 16-year-old Olympic winner, this glorious 50m (164-ft) pool overlooks Woolloomooloo Bay and Garden Island. Its patrons take their laps and suntans seriously, but the toddlers' pool is perfect for those who just want to dip their toes.

3 Wollemi Pine
Discovered in 1994 in a Blue Mountains (below & p121) canyon, this botanical curiosity was thought to be extinct. The Royal Botanic Garden's specimen was planted in 1998.

During the Sydney Festival in January, call 1300 366 649 for details of the Open Air Cinema.

4 Cadi Jam Ora: First Encounters

This award-winning presentation of the Eora people's story offers an intriguing look at white settlement, Sydney's environment, and the Eora's spiritual connection with their land.

7 Sydney Tropical Centre

Tropical ecosystems are recreated in the centre's two glasshouses (above), the Pyramid and the Arc. The Pyramid features Australian natives, while the Arc houses the "exotics". Follow the walkways up to the canopy level to admire plants from the tropics.

8 Conservatorium of Music

Designed by Francis Greenway (see p23), this building (below) was one of the first casualties of the enquiry into the cost of Macquarie's public works. "The Con" has been training future musicians since 1915.

9 Government House

Gipps was the first governor to occupy this Gothic Revival structure in 1845. It ceased to be the governor's residence in 1996, and the house and grounds are now open to the public.

5 Palm House

The Victorian era glasshouse was designed by James Barnet (see p77) to display tropical plants. The plants are now in the Sydney Tropical Centre and the Palm House is used for art exhibitions.

6 Art Gallery of New South Wales

The AGNSW (right & pp24-25) has a permanent collection of Australian, European, Asian and indigenous art.

10 Walks & Tours

The Royal Botanic Garden's volunteers conduct free guided walks which depart from the Garden's shop. The walks run daily at 10:30am and also at 1pm on weekdays during autumn, winter and spring except for public holidays. An Aboriginal Heritage Tour is conducted every Friday at 10am and costs $28 per person.

Mrs Biggs' Bathing Box

The Eora enjoyed the sheltered waters of Woolloomooloo Bay for thousands of years before young Andrew Charlton won the 1,500-m (1,640-yard) race at the 1924 Olympics. The colony's first public baths, The Fig Tree Baths, stood on the site of the "Boy" Charlton pool. Several establishments once catered to the delicate sensibilities of Sydney's lady bathers, including one owned by a Mrs Biggs. An artwork by Robyn Backen, The Archaeology of Bathing, recalls Mrs Biggs' 1833 Bathing Machine, designed to protect the modesty of her patrons from bothersome manly gazes as well as sharks.

1 The Astor

One of Sydney's first skyscrapers, this elegant 1920s apartment building has housed artistic notables such as artist Portia Geach and actor, writer and comic Barry Humphries.

2 State Library of NSW

More than five million items are held in the Library's Mitchell (1910) and Macquarie (1988) Wings (see p45). The exhibition spaces showcase this collection and the library holds a range of talks and events. ☎ Free tours 11am Tue & 2pm Thu

3 Parliament House

The oldest parliament house in the world began in 1816 as a wing of the "Rum Hospital," built by contractors licensed to import rum into the colony in lieu of payment. The New South Wales Legislative Council held its first meeting here in 1829.

4 Sydney Hospital

This structure replaced the central wing of the Rum Hospital in the 1880s. The statue of a boar, Il Porcellino, is a replica of a 1547 Florentine artwork.

5 Martin Place

Australia's grandest banks reside on this broad plaza (see p77). A Cenotaph near George Street commemorates Australia's war dead, and The Passage by Anne Graham celebrates Sydney's Georgian heritage.

6 Mint Museum

An elegant museum and home to the Historic Houses Trust, this 1816 Rum Hospital wing was converted in 1854 into a branch of London's Royal Mint. ☎ Open 9:30am-5pm Mon-Fri

7 Hyde Park Barracks

Perhaps Francis Greenway's finest work, these barracks were built in 1819 to house convicts. Later a hostel for immigrant women and then courtrooms, since 1979 it has been a museum of the site and its varied occupants (see p42).

8 Great Irish Famine Memorial

Built into a barrack wall is this memorial to the victims of the Famine (1845-48). This catastrophe forced 30,000 Irish women and over 4,000 orphans to migrate to Australia; some were housed at the barracks.

9 St James Church

Another Greenway gem, this 1822 church was originally intended as a court house. Don't miss the superb 1930s mural in the Children's Chapel.

10 Queen's Square

Governor Macquarie en-visaged this small square as Sydney's civic centre. In the 1890s it was a rallying point for protesters, among them Republicans who would mount Queen Victoria's statue to address the masses.

Francis Greenway: Convict Architect

Detail of Hyde Park Barracks wall

Inspired. Vain. Delusional. No single epithet adequately describes Francis Howard Greenway. In 1809 Greenway, a partner in an architectural firm, was found guilty of forging a contract, and was sentenced to 14 years in the colony. Soon after his arrival in 1814, Governor Macquarie realised that Greenway's architectural talent was equal to his own Enlightenment aspirations, and in 1816 he appointed Greenway as Colonial Architect and Assistant Engineer. Starting with the Macquarie Lighthouse on South Head, Greenway and Governor and Mrs Macquarie set about transforming Sydney's civic landscape. Unfortunately, not everyone shared their ambitions, and reports of extravagance filtered back to London. Commissioner JT Bigge arrived in Sydney in 1819 to investigate and halted most public works. His censure of the Macquaries' taste for ornamentation deprived Greenway of his patrons, who departed the colony in 1822. Despite his major contribution to the standard of Colonial architecture, Greenway struggled in private practice and died a poor man in 1837.

TOP 10 Art Gallery of New South Wales

Conceived in the 1870s and opened to the public in 1909, AGNSW contains some of the finest artworks in Australia. Situated on a grand drive in The Domain, it has always been a wonderful place to escape the heat and bustle of the city. More than a million visitors a year enjoy its permanent collection of Australian, Asian, Aboriginal, contemporary and European art. The Yiribana Gallery is of particular interest, presenting Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander artists from different communities and backgrounds.

5 Australian Art Collection
Featuring major names in Australian art, this collection displays works by luminaries such as Sidney Nolan, Grace Cossington-Smith (left), Brett Whiteley and Arthur Boyd. There are many works by local Sydney artists (see p26) and several great images of the city.

6 Contemporary Collection
Significant works by local and international contemporary artists, both established and emerging, are displayed, alongside 20th-century pieces by luminaries such as Giacometti, Picasso, Kiefer and Kirchner (right).

7 Temporary Exhibitions
Several spaces at AGNSW are dedicated to temporary exhibitions. While some display contemporary art, others are retrospectives spanning a movement or an artist's career. Entry can entail a minor fee.

8 Art After Hours
On Wednesday nights until 9pm, the gallery draws a keen after-work crowd with its free film screenings, celebrity talks, jazz and access to all exhibitions.

9 Archibald, Wynne & Sulman Prizes
The annual Archibald prize is for portraiture, the Sulman for genre painting and the Wynne for landscape painting.

Café & Restaurant 10

The AGNSW café is a great spot to take a break. The award-winning restaurant serves an extensive menu featuring locally-sourced ingredients, along with Australian wines. It also offers a well-priced high tea daily.

Looking Towards Asia

AGNSW's collection of Asian art began in 1879, when the Japanese Government made a large donation of ceramics and bronzes. However, it didn't become a distinct department until 1979, when Edmund Capon was appointed gallery director. Capon wisely noted that the art of Asia is the art of half of the world. With him at the helm, the AGNSW has extended the collection to include Southeast Asian textiles, Buddhist arts, Japanese Screens, Indian sculptures and Ming, Qing and modern Chinese paintings.

TOP 10 Top 10 Sydney Artists

1 Brett Whiteley (1939–92)
The bad boy of Australian art, Whiteley (see p93) was a prodigious talent who won the trifecta of Archibald, Wynne and Sulman prizes (see p25) twice in consecutive years. He died of a heroin overdose in 1992.

2 John Olsen (b. 1928)
Considered Australia's most esteemed living painter, Olsen was awarded the Order of Australia in 2001. Olsen has travelled widely in Australia and abroad, continuously mapping his travels with paintings.

3 Lloyd Rees (1895–1988)
Renowned for his landscape paintings, Rees also produced hundreds of drawings, many of which are in the collection of AGNSW. He began printmaking in his 80s, and continued to etch even while losing his sight.

4 Grace Cossington-Smith (1892–1984)
Sydney's first significant female artist, she was particularly interested in form and colour. She painted still lifes, landscapes and religious subjects.

5 Max Dupain (1911–92)
Dupain recorded much of Australia's architectural history through his art, both Colonial and Modern. However, it is for his wonderful iconoclastic 1937 photo, The Sunbaker, that he is most celebrated.

6 Margaret Olley (b. 1923)
Olley has always concentrated on painting still lifes and interiors. In 1948 William Dobell won the Archibald for his portrait of Olley, which is in the AGNSW's collection.

7 Margaret Preston (1875–1963)
Preston's art was highly influenced by Pacific Islander, Chinese and Japanese cultures. Recognising the value of Aboriginal art, she was a key figure in the Australian Modernist movement.

8 William Yang (b. 1943)
Initially a playwright, he moved into social photography and documented Sydney's blossoming gay community, bringing it from the underworld into the spotlight.

9 Susan Norrie (b. 1953)
One of Australia's most successful contemporary artists, Norrie works in multiple media. Her works are displayed in the collections of significant galleries such as the Guggenheim and the MCA (see p44).

10 Imants Tillers (b. 1950)
A former architect, he designed the roof of the Federation Pavilion in Centennial Park (see pp39 & 47). Interestingly, Tillers works on small canvas boards simply because they fit on his drawing board.

Images of Sydney

Since the first Europeans arrived in the late 18th century, artists have been documenting the changing landscape of Sydney. In early years, Sydney was often painted as a kind of fantasy, using the familiar green slopes of England instead of the new dry, strange land. Eventually Sydney's settlers stopped wishing for the pastures left behind, and subsequent generations rejoiced in the blue skies and sparkling harbour. The construction of the Harbour Bridge inspired a whole new group of artists, who photographed as well as painted it, signalling the emergence of Sydney as an international city. Brett Whiteley concocted luscious images of the harbour and its surrounds in the 1970s, and in the 1980s Ken Done made his fortune selling clothes printed with bright sketches of the Opera House. Now more than ever, Sydney artists are part of the global artistic community.

Eugene Von Guérard, Sydney Heads, 1865

Brett Whiteley, The Balcony 2, 1975

This powerful oil on canvas can be found at the AGNSW, where it has been exhibited since 1981. Brett Whiteley produced some of the most distinctive and vivid images of Sydney and its harbour ever painted.

TOP 10 Darling Harbour & Chinatown

Cockle Bay was once a working harbour district where some of Sydney's poorest lived in hovels surrounded by shipyards, cargo wharves and quarries. In anticipation of the 1988 Bicentenary, a huge redevelopment project was launched to reclaim this 54-ha (133-acre) site, and the area was revitalised through the wonderful Aquarium, the Maritime and Powerhouse Museums, and the Cockle Bay and King St Wharf developments. Combined with a visit to Chinatown, Darling Harbour makes for a lively and entertaining excursion.

2 Pyrmont Bridge
Opened in 1902, this 369-m (1,210-ft) bridge, with a quaint copper-roofed control cabin, is the oldest electrically-operated swingspan bridge in the world. It swings open to allow vessels up to 14 m (46ft) tall to enter or depart Cockle Bay.

5 Chinese Garden
 The garden (left) was China's gift to Sydney during Australia's 1988 bicentenary celebrations. Interpretation boards provide insights into Chinese garden design and philosophy, and the Tea House makes for a peaceful retreat from the harbour.

10 Sydney Wildlife World
 Next door to Sydney Aquarium, visit over 100 Australian native animals in their natural habitats. There are various tours available which provide interactive experiences with the animals (below).

6 Chinatown
 This is the spirited epicentre of Sydney's very large Chinese community, where restaurants vie for attention with fabric shops, Asian grocers, jewellers, music stores and gift shops. It is best visited for a Friday night market. Chinese New Year celebrations here (Jan/Feb) are among the largest and most spectacular outside Asia.

8 Paddy's Market
 Associated with the Haymarket area for 150 years, Paddy's Market is the place to find a pair of koala oven mitts or an Opera House watch, as well as food (below), souvenirs, flowers, homeware and cheap accessories. Market City has clothing outlets and entertainment venues.

7 Capitol Theatre
 Built in the 1920s, this theatre has seen many comebacks. Its most recent restoration in the 1990s gave the Mediterranean-blue ceiling and twinkling stars a new lease on life. The orchestra pit at Capitol is the largest in the country. It is now a well-known venue for popular musicals.

9 Powerhouse Museum
 At Australia's most inventive and engaging museum, children are not the only ones to enjoy the interactive displays. A child-friendly café is located on the lowest gallery level of the museum (see pp30-31).

"Buffalo Bill" Cole's Wild West Show
 In the early 1900s, the intersection opposite Paddy's Market was a regular venue for "Buffalo Bill" Cole's Wild West Show. The English-born owner of the circus, Edward Cole, and his American partner, "Texas Jack", recruited a cast of locals to dress as cowboys and Indians and enact a wagon train ambush on horseback. Cole, as Buffalo Bill, always rode to the rescue of the besieged pioneers. In later years Cole modified his performances and included Australia's most famous bush-ranger, Ned Kelly, in the show's line-up.

TOP 10 Powerhouse Museum

One of Sydney's most distinguished and popular cultural institutions, the Powerhouse Museum has an extraordinary array of treasures across decorative arts and design, science, technology, space, transport and social history. A superb series of temporary exhibitions complements the range of inspiring permanent galleries. Kids can lose themselves in the interactive play spaces, Zoe's House and the Magic Garden. It's also worth setting aside time to explore the shop for unusual and exclusive gifts.

Michael and Heather Mobbs created the "Sustainable House" in 1996, when deciding to renovate their inner-city terrace with minimum environmental impact. It had to generate electricity through solar power, supply water from rain-water tanks and treat its own sewage. In the process, the Mobbs explored everything from the least toxic floor sealants to raising the efficiency of their refrigerator. "EcoLogic" features an interactive 3D model that shows how energy and water are used in the Sustainable House.

TOP 10 Taronga Zoo

The zoo occupies a spectacular setting amid 28 ha (75 acres) of landscaped bushland overlooking the harbour. Just above the wharf is the Sky Safari, which carries visitors up the hill, over the enclosures and terraced slopes to the lovely Edwardian Entrance Pavilion and Information Centre. The centre provides tour information and brochures describing the zoo's 380 resident species and 2,200 individual animals. Many enclosures recreate natural habitats, such as the Australian Walkabout, which enables visitors to actually experience the animals' original environments. Finally, magical views complement the enjoyable ferry ride returning to Circular Quay.

Meet emus, koalas (above), kangaroos and wallabies in the Australian Walkabout section. The Nocturnal House is home to bilbies, wombats, quolls, platypus and feather-tail gliders. Don't miss Ken and his harem in the Koala Walkabout exhibit.

2 Great Southern Ocean
A 3-acre (1.2 ha) precinct houses Taronga's seals, sealions, pelicans and penguins. The exhibit recreates the animals' natural habitat with the glass-fronted enclosure revealing their movements.

3 Backyard to Bush
This innovative exhibit melds the suburban home and the natural environment. Children can engage with farmyard animals at a small farm, and a wombat (left) burrow enables a glimpse into the domestic life of these little mammals. There's a playground too.

Take the Sky Safari up, get a map, and enjoy a leisurely walk down the terraces and back to the ferry wharf.

4 African Species

Perched high above Sydney Harbour, the giraffes are one of the many African species at Taronga. The zoo is also home to meercats, hippopotami, zebras and barbary sheep.

7 Primates

You don't need the map to find the Gorilla Forest, the Orangutan Rainforest (below), or the Chimpanzee Park: just follow the delighted screams of youngsters. Wild Asia celebrated the birth of a Francois' Langur infant in 2010 to parents Hanoi and Saigon. Check out the primates' outlandish hairstyles as well as their gymnastics.

5 Wild Asia

Housing the Zoo's much-loved seven Asian elephants, Wild Asia is an experience not to be missed. Follow the leafy trail to see spotted deer, langurs and binturongs. Don't miss seeing the Malaysian tapir swim with otters and coi carp.

6 Big Cats

Taronga Zoo's big cats – the lions, tigers, snow leopards and fishing cats – are a sight to behold, especially when they enjoy their meals. Take a tour to find out more about these amazing creatures.

8 Serpentaria

Some of the exhibits here are stunning: the Komodo dragon, the red-eyed tree frog and the Fijian banded iguana for starters. If you enjoy a shiver running down your spine, don't miss Australia's deadly taipan or the South American boa constrictor.

9 South American Species

It's hard to ignore the world's largest bird of prey, the Andean condor, the flamboyant Victoria-crowned pigeon, or the antics of the Central American squirrel monkey. The colourful macaws and sun conures are like feathered rainbows.

10 Free Flight Bird Show

This show features a variety of free flighted birds including Frodo, the barking owl, who joins the Andean Condor, Leslie, and a host of native and exotic species who fly and swoop above the heads of spectators.

Australian Shark Attack File

The zoo maintains the Australian Shark Attack File. The first recorded fatality was in 1791 on the north coast of NSW. The last fatal attack in Sydney Harbour was in 1963. Don't let this put you off the beaches; they are extremely safe from sharks. Curiously, one of Sydney's most famous crimes, the "shark arm murder", was initially blamed on a shark. A shark captured in 1935 regurgitated a tattooed human arm. The victim was soon identified as a criminal underworld type, James Smith, whose arm had apparently been severed by a knife, not a shark. To this day, no one knows whodunit.

TOP 10 Bondi Beach

Bondi may just be the most famous stretch of sand in the world. This glorious 1-km (0.6-mile) long sweep of golden sand, with rugged Ben Buckler at its northern end and the Bondi Icebergs to the south, is Sydney's favourite playground, packed with swimmers, surfers and people-watchers. Just before the beach is the lively Campbell Parade, beyond which is a diverse suburb that embraces surf culture, artists, actors, media tycoons and the vibrant Jewish, Kiwi, Brazilian and Pacific Islander communities. There is some serious money and glamour in Bondi, but it's never snobbish and always great fun.

1 The Beach

It's hard to resist this gorgeous arc of golden sand (right), even given how crowded it gets in peak season. Hire a deck chair if towels aren't your thing, and sit back and enjoy the scenery. One of Bondi's great attractions is its varied tribe of devotees.

2 Swimming

The sand shelves off gently at the northern end of the beach (above), ideal for body surfing. Always swim between the flags. If the weather is on the wild side, leave the water to the surfers and enjoy the Coastal Walk instead.

3 Surfing

It would be a shame to visit this famous surfing beach without at least trying to catch a wave. The southern end of Bondi Beach is restricted to surfers; boards and wet suits are available for hire nearby. Get a lesson from Let's Go Surfing.

4 Ben Buckler

If you ever doubted the power of the ocean, check out the rock just below Bondi's northern headland, Ben Buckler. According to its brass plaque, this 240-tonne monster washed up during a storm in 1912. The nearby rock pool is great for children.

5 Campbell Parade

Bondi's main tourist drag (above) is always buzzing. Backpackers and tourists rub shoulders with supermodels, surfies and actors. It's a great place for gelati, fish and chips, or a beer overlooking the water.

8 Coastal Walk

Start this spectacular 5-km (3-mile) walk behind the Bondi Icebergs. Follow the path around to Tamarama Beach, also known as "Glamarama" for its "beautiful people". Further down the path is Bronte Beach (right), followed by tiny Clovelly Beach (see pp48-9), Gordon's Bay and Coogee, a less crowded version of Bondi.

10 Surf Lifesavers

Those tanned and athletic men and women patrolling the beach in red and yellow caps (below) are members of either Bondi Beach's Surf Bathers' Life Saving Club or North Bondi SLSC. These are two of the oldest clubs in Australia.

6 Pavilion

This 1920s pavilion is home to a lively community cultural centre that hosts movies, theatre, workshops, free art exhibitions and special events. There are also showers and changing rooms inside.

7 Bondi Icebergs

So named because its members swim throughout winter, this clubhouse (right) is a Bondi institution. It's home to a fine restaurant (see p58) and the world's only surf-life saving museum. Don't miss its saltwater pool washed clean by ocean swells.

9 Sculpture by the Sea

Combine your coastal walk with this annual festival, at which more than 100 artists take full advantage of Bondi's wind-sculpted sandstone headlands as the setting for their works. They are exhibited from late October to November.

Black Sunday

On 6 February 1938, three large waves rolled into Bondi Beach in quick succession. As they receded, hundreds of swimmers were swept out to sea in the backwash. By good fortune, almost 80 members of the Bondi Surf Bathers' Life Saving Club were gathered on the beach in readiness for a competition. Suddenly they were faced with the real thing. Between them, they rescued more than 250 swimmers, which was a remarkable achievement. Unfortunately and despite their best efforts, five swimmers drowned. To this day the tragedy is remembered as Black Sunday.

TOP 10 Moments in History

1 Aborigines Reach Cadi
The original settlers of Sydney Harbour, the Aboriginal Eora people, arrived almost 50,000 years ago. They fished in the summer months, and during winter they sought food inland and north towards the Hawkesbury River. At the time of white settlement, 1,500 Eora were estimated to live around the Sydney Harbour area.

2 Captain Cook Lands
After observing the Transit of Venus in Tahiti for the Royal Society, Captain James Cook was instructed by the British Admiralty in 1769 to discover and claim the "Great South Continent". He arrived at Botany Bay on 28 April 1770.

3 First Fleet Arrives
Governor Phillip and the First Fleet of 11 ships, carrying 1,500 convicts, guards, military officials and their families, arrived at Botany Bay in 1788. Unable to find sufficient fresh water, Phillip sailed north and found one of the world's "finest harbours". The colony was established at a small cove named in honour of Phillip's neighbour, Viscount Sydney.

4 Rum Corps
The irascible and disliked Governor Bligh threatened to curtail the privileges enjoyed by officers of the NSW "Rum Corps", so named for their use of liquor as a form of currency. They "arrested" Bligh as retaliation in 1808, but their coup was short-lived as they were soon ordered back home to England.

5 Macquarie Takes Charge
Governor Lachlan Macquarie took charge of the colony in 1810 and restored order. During his 12-year governance, he managed to transform the outpost from a ramshackle penal colony into a town with regular roads and civic amenities. He also encouraged Emancipists, convicts who had served their time, to stay and contribute to the colony's growth, thus ensuring a thriving future for Sydney.

6 Dunbar Sinks
On a wild night in 1857, the migrant ship Dunbar, en route to Sydney from England, struck rocks near the Heads. Only one passenger survived, while 121 others drowned. It remains the state's worst ever maritime disaster and came as a bitter blow to the young colony.

7 Troops Set Sail

East. Almost 330,000 Australian troops served overseas and 60,000 died, which was the highest death rate per head of population of all nations involved in the war.

8 Builders' Labourers Impose Green Bans

Several areas, including The Rocks and Woolloomooloo, were saved from developers' wrecking balls in the 1970s. Fortunately for Sydney's future, the Builders' Labourers Federation imposed "Green Bans" on projects that clearly threatened environmentally or historically significant buildings and precincts.

9 Mardi Gras is Born

Over 1,000 gay rights activists took to Sydney's streets demanding equal rights in 1978. Several protestors were arrested, but they vowed to return the following year. The parade that followed in 1979 established an annual event that is now a major tourist attraction (see p72).

10 Cathy Freeman Lights the Olympic Flame

With increasingly more citizens calling for reconciliation between black and white Australia, many rose to their feet when champion Aboriginal runner Cathy Freeman lit the Olympic flame to signal the start of the first Olympic Games of the new millennium in September 2000.

Top 10 Sydney Personalities

1 Pemulwy

This Eora warrior resisted white settlement until he was caught and beheaded in 1802.

2 John & Elizabeth Macarthur

The resourceful Macarthurs established Australia's agricultural industry in 1790.

3 William "Billy" Blue

He started a ferry service between Dawes Point and the North Shore (see p115).

4 Wentworth, Blaxland & Lawson

Opening up Australia's interior, these European explorers crossed the Blue Mountains (see p121) in 1813.

5 Caroline Chisholm

She arrived from Madras in 1838 to establish much-needed services for poor immigrant women.

6 Sir Henry Parkes

A five-time premier of NSW, Parkes was a major proponent of Federation in the late 1890s (see p39).

7 Tilley Devine & Kate Leigh

These madams of crime vied for control of Sydney's 1920s and 30s "razor gangs".

8 Lars Halvorsen

This boatbuilder arrived from Norway in 1921 to establish Sydney's most famous boatbuilding dynasty.

9 Jack Munday

Secretary of the Builders' Labourers Federation, Munday led the Green Bans (see p85) movement in the 1970s.

TOP 10 Historic Sites & Buildings

1 Aboriginal Rock Art

Several locations around Sydney contain Aboriginal rock art, including Ku-ring-gai Chase National Park (see p122), the Royal National Park (see p123), and the Brisbane Water National Park (see p127). One of the most accessible sites is the North Bondi Golf Course, where you'll find rock carvings just below the tower on Military Road.

2 Captain Cook's Landing Place

Captain James Cook and the crew of the Endeavour came ashore at what is now Botany Bay on 29 April 1770. On 6 May they sailed north, soon passing the entrance to a harbour which appeared to offer safe anchorage. Cook named this Port Jackson; the

3 Tank Stream

The freshwater Tank Stream determined the site of white settlement in 1788. Other than two artworks near Circular Quay (see p18), its only visible remains are in a small display including several items found during excavations, located beneath the old GPO. 📍 Map M3 • 1 Martin Place • Viewing Room: lower level • Open 8:15am–5:30pm Mon–Fri, 9am–1pm Sat

4 Collins Beach

Landing at Collins Beach (see p118) in 1790, Governor Phillip and his officers met a group of Aborigines including Bennelong (see p9). An Eora man, never having seen white men before, speared Phillip through the shoulder. Assuming the man had misunderstood his intentions, Philip made no reprisal – that time. 📍 Map U3

8 Federation Pavilion
 Prior to Federation on 1 January 1901, Australia was not a united nation but actually six unaligned and competing colonies, comprising New South Wales, Victoria, Tasmania, Queensland, South Australia and West Australia. This 1988 pavilion in Centennial Park (see p50) marks the site of the historic original pavilion, which was right at the centre of celebrations in 1901. 📍 Map F5

9 Manly Beach
 Newspaper editor William Gocher challenged the laws in 1902 by enjoying a midday swim at Manly (see p118). His crime? It was illegal to swim in public between 6am and 8pm. Thanks to Gocher's bold action, daylight bathing was legalised within a year, provided that one always wore a conservative neck-to-knee swimsuit. 📍 Map U3

TOP 10 Writers

1 Patrick White (1912–90)
Australia's Nobel prize-winning author for the Eye of the Storm (1973) hailed from a family of wealthy Australian pastoralists. He spent much of his early life in Europe but settled near Centennial Park (see p50) in 1964. Although he wrote poetry and plays, he is best remembered for his novels, which often explore individuals' efforts to divine meaning from the circumstances of their lives.

2 Kylie Tennant (1912–88)
Best known for her 1943 novel Ride on Stranger, Kylie Tennant often presented life from the perspective of the dispossessed. Despite her later success as an author, reviewer and lecturer, Tennant also experienced life on the other side of the tracks, including a short stint in jail in the 1930s.

Kylie Tennant

3 Frank Moorhouse (b. 1938)
His early stories focused on middle-class, small-town Australia, demonstrating his affinity with the "new journalism" of Americans such as Tom Wolfe. Grand Days and Dark Palace trace the aspirations and disappointments of the League of Nations through the eyes of an Australian woman.

4 Peter Corris (b. 1942)
Sydney's Raymond Chandler, Peter Corris writes hard-boiled crime fiction set in and around Sydney. His main protagonist, Cliff Hardy, is a private detective forever sorting through the trash of the powerful and wealthy.

5 Kenneth Slessor (1901–71)
Poet Kenneth Slessor will always be remembered for his 1939 elegy "Five Bells," written for a friend who drowned. Another poem, "Beach Burial" (1944), written while serving as a war correspondent near El Alamein, describes the burial of sailors washed up on shore after battles in the Mediterranean.

6 May Gibbs (1876–1969)
May Gibbs wrote and illustrated children's stories that were distinguished for their inventiveness and their use of Australian flora and fauna. Nutcote (see p116), her home for more than 40 years, is now a museum dedicated to her work.

7 Miles Franklin (1879–1954)

Franklin struggled for years following the success of her 1901 novel, My Brilliant Career, but found renewed interest in 1928 when she published Up the Country. She was an early feminist and worked with women's groups in the USA and as a nurse in Europe during World War I. Upon her death, her estate established Australia's most prestigious literary award, named in her honour.

8 Henry Lawson (1867–1922)

Lawson's writing is often humorous and inspired by romantic notions of the Australian "character". In stories such as 1892's The Drover's Wife he exalted the "mateship" of rural Australians surviving the harsh and isolated environment. He often led an itinerant life and struggled with alcoholism. He was the first Australian writer granted a state funeral.

9 Ruth Park (b. 1923)

Park's two most famous novels, The Harp in the South, (1948) and its sequel Poor Man's Orange (1949), explored life in 1930s Surry Hills, which was then one of Sydney's poorest slums. She also wrote Playing Beatie Bow, a children's novel which is set in The Rocks in 1873.

10 Thomas Keneally (b. 1935)

Keneally is a prolific and prize-winning author who has had several of his historical novels translated into film. His subjects have ranged from Aboriginal resistance, in The Chant of Jimmy Blacksmith (1972), to the Holocaust, in 1982's Schindler's Ark.

5 Careful He Might Hear You (1963)

By Sumner Locke Elliot. A 1930s orphan resists his aunt's efforts to adopt him.

6 The Glass Canoe (1976)

David Ireland's darkly comic novel is set in the masculine world of a suburban pub.

7 Puberty Blues (1979)

A coming-of-age 1970s beach culture story by Kathy Lette and Gabrielle Carey.

8 Oscar and Lucinda (1988)

This Booker Prize-winning novel by Peter Carey traces a romance between a gambling minister and an heiress.

9 Looking for Alibrandi (1992)

Melina Marchetta's coming-of-age novel features a young girl struggling to find her identity.

10 Monkey's Mask (1994)

Dorothy Porter's verse novel features a lesbian private detective and several poetic red herrings.

TOP 10 Architectural Highlights

1 Sydney Opera House
If you only manage to explore one building in Sydney, make it this World Heritage-listed one. Not simply beautiful from afar, a close look at the shells' interior reveals the complexity of the gravity-defying construction. Modifications are underway to improve facilities and realise Jørn Utzon's original vision for the interiors. 📍 See pp8–11

2 Sydney Theatre & Walsh Bay
The Walsh Bay wharves were the first World Heritage-listed urban site in Australia, encompassing an elegant precinct made up of theatres, restaurants, a hotel and apartments. Shipping timbers and dock machinery have been incorporated into the new buildings. 📍 Map M1
• Pier 4, 22 Hickson Rd, Walsh Bay

3 Aurora Place
The ethereal white glass skin and sails atop Renzo Piano's office block and apartment buildings, built in 2000, echo the Opera House's shells and the spinnakers of yachts on the harbour. They also regulate the temperature, making the skyscraper one of the most energy-efficient buildings in the CBD. 📍 Map N3
• 88 Phillip St

Governor Phillip Tower

4 Governor Phillip Tower
Part of a large development on a historic site, the base of this elegant high-rise carefully slopes over several 19th-century terrace houses. The neighbouring Museum of Sydney (see p42) preserves the footings of the first Government House. In Mission Impossible 2, Tom Cruise abseiled through the roof's steel blades. 📍 Map M3 • 1 Farrer Place

5 Altair
Designed by Sydney's arbiters of style, Engelen Moore, Altair has won two World Architecture Awards. It is recognised for its environmental performance and sleek lines. Mechanical louvres on the building's façade open to catch the breeze. 📍 Map Q5
• 3 Kings Cross Rd, Rushcutters Bay

6 Australia Square
Built in the 1960s, this structure was a revisioning of Sydney's downtown, combining office, retail and public space. The building is still revered as a marvel of concrete construction. Architect Harry Seidler chamfered the building's corners to reduce its shadow, giving the tower its iconic round form. 📍 Map 3 • 264–278 George St • Adm

7 Republic 2

Over-scaled openings animate the grand façade of this cool white apartment complex, designed by the architectural style gurus Burley Katon Halliday. The large apartments are situated around a sunny, stone-paved courtyard, complete with sculpture and a great breakfast café. Map P5 • 46–50 Burton St, Darlinghurst

8 Rose Seidler House

Sydney's most significant architect, whose work spans over 50 years, Harry Seidler was almost single-handedly responsible for bringing Bauhaus and European Modernism to Australia. This modest but lovely house, commissioned by Seidler's mother in 1950, assimilates the best Modernist features. Also check out its interesting collection of original furniture and appliances. Map T2 • 71 Clissold Rd, Wahroonga • Open 10am–5pm Sun • 9989 8020 • Adm

9 Sydney Football Stadium

The roof of this stadium (see p53) is a low-slung "Mexican hat" which allows tantalising glimpses of sports crowds from nearby Fox Studios. Designed by local architect Phillip Cox, it was built to coincide with Sydney's Bicentenary in 1988. Map E5 • Driver Ave, Moore Park

10 Homebush Train Station

Not often is a station so architecturally interesting: this one is a rare beast. Supporting a delicate membrane roof, 18 vaulted arches hover over the rail platform and provide an impressive gateway to the extensive Homebush sporting complex (see pp52–53). Map S4 • Olympic Park, Homebush

The Eastern Suburb's crescent-shaped Bondi Beach

TOP 10 Beaches

1 Bondi
Australia's most famous beach is a perfect crescent of sand with good surfing spots at either end, and usually calm enough for a swim in the middle. Being so close to the city, it won't take too long to get your toes wet (see pp34–5).

2 Manly
On the peninsula's ocean side, this popular long beach (see p118) is the homeground of many of Australia's ironmen and women, and the site of surf lifesaving championships. The esplanade is good for jogging and rollerblading, and goes all the way round to lovely, sheltered Shelly Beach.

3 Palm
An hour's drive north of Sydney, the area around this beach is a magnet for the city's glitterati. "Palmie" is a lovely beach fringed by pine trees, and was made famous by the soap opera Home and Away. For a cruisy afternoon, catch the Pittwater ferry for a loop around the bay (see p122).

Pelicans at Palm Beach

4 Cronulla
This beach in the southern suburbs was immortalised in Puberty Blues. Still a grommet (young surfer wannabes) training ground, it hasn't lost any of its teen appeal. Grab a chiko roll and get into the spirit. ☺ Map T6

5 Maroubra
The Eastern Suburbs' most serious surf beach has big waves and a wide stretch of sand. When you're done with the water, walk round the coast to see a series of rockpools brimming with sealife. Maroubra offers good facilities such as a shaded playground, changing rooms and a kiosk. ☺ Map U5

6 Clontarf
This harbour beach is wonderful for small children. There's plenty of shade, a playground, a shallow tidal pool, and a great view of yachts moving to and from the marina opposite. After your swim, satisfy your hunger across the bay at The Spit with a satisfying plate of fish and chips. ☺ Map U3

7 Balmoral
Another excellent children's beach, Balmoral has a large enclosure of shark nets bordered by a wooden boardwalk which kids love to jump off. Grassy picnic areas abound, the water is warm and calm, and there are many places to buy the kids an ice cream. ☺ Map U3

Bronte's swimming baths

8 Bronte
The picnic area at this small beach is dotted with little huts that provide picnic tables and shelter from the wind. On the weekends it's packed with groups of 20-somethings and families enjoying barbecues and beer. Bronte also boasts a great ocean pool and a fabulous row of cafés. Map G6

9 Clovelly
If you walk between the cliffs that separate Bronte and Clovelly, you'll pass through Waverley Cemetery, where Aussie poet Henry Lawson (see p41) rests. Due to its backwater, Clovelly's waters are very calm, making it wonderful for children, laps and snorkelling. Map U4

10 Nielsen Park
On summer weekends, this sheltered harbour beach is packed with picnicking families. The adjacent park (see p51) has good spots for cricket or frisbee. Small children can safely play in the water, but keep in mind that the harbour floor dips away suddenly. Map G2

TOP 10 Parks & Gardens

1 Bradleys Head
Walking trails take you around the tip of one of Sydney Harbour National Park's highlights, where you can often spot noisy flocks of rainbow lorikeets. At the end of the headland is the tripod mast of the original HMAS Sydney (see p13) and a small Doric column marking one nautical mile from Fort Denison (see p38). ☉ Map F2

2 Centennial Park
Sydney's Central Park is a gorgeous 220-ha (543-acre) expanse of playing fields, horse-riding facilities (see pp54 & 57), ornamental lakes and ponds, cultivated gardens, sports grounds, cycle and jogging paths and light bushland with beautiful paperbark trees. It is the largest open space in the central area and a popular destination for barbecues and picnics. ☉ Map E5

3 Garigal National Park

This rainforest zone on the North Shore may offer you the best chance to spy the elusive lyrebird in its natural habitat. You will also find tree ferns and cabbage tree palms (Livistonia Australis), which were used by white settlers for everything from hats to building materials. ☉ Map T3

Red gum tree at Lane Cove

Giant chess board at Hyde Park

4 Hyde Park
Standing at the edge of the city centre, this formal park provides a respite from the city's bustle. It features a magnificent avenue of figs, the Art Deco Archibald Fountain at its northern end and the Anzac Memorial (see p78). A site for public executions in 1802, only one year later it was used for Sydney's first cricket match. Australia's first horse race was run here in 1810. ☉ Map N4

5 Lane Cove National Park
The park follows Lane Cove River, which flows into Sydney Harbour. Here you'll find echidnas, sugar gliders, mangroves, dusky moorhens, sheltered gullies and open eucalypt forests with stately Sydney red gums (Angophora costata) growing out of the sandstone. At dusk their smooth pink bark is almost luminous. ☉ Map S3

 Left Greycliffe House at Nielson Park Right North Head's Shelly Beach

6 Arthur McElhone Reserve
 Tucked below Kings Cross, this tiny manicured park is located in Elizabeth Bay (see p86). It has a stone bridge over a trickling pond filled with Koi, and magnificent views of the yachts moored in Rushcutters Bay and the ritzy Eastern Suburbs enclave of Darling Point. Map Q3

7 Nielsen Park
 Overlooking Shark Bay, this park (see p49) has been a Sydney favourite since 1912. At its north end is Shark Beach and the historic Greycliffe House (see 98). To the west is Steel Point, site of a former defensive battery, and the start of the 1.5-km (1-mile) Hermitage Foreshore Walk back to Rose Bay.

8 North Head
 The more rugged of the two Heads, this section of the Sydney Harbour National Park features windswept heathlands, shaded gullies, secluded Collins Beach and the Old Quarantine Station (see p118). Pretty Cabbage Tree Bay and Shelly Beach (see p118) are to the north. Map U3

9 Observatory Park
 Given its location beside the southern approach to the Sydney Harbour Bridge, this small park below the Observatory (see p19) is surprisingly peaceful. It offers great views of the working harbour. Near the bandstand is a memorial to the Australians who served in the South African War (1899–1902). Map D3

10 South Head
 Governor Phillip spent his first night in Sydney Harbour, 22 January 1788, inside South Head (see p98). The headland features the red-and-white striped Hornby Lighthouse, so-painted to distinguish it from the Macquarie Lighthouse. It's a prime vantage spot for viewing the Sydney to Hobart yacht race (see p73).

Left Boating at the Royal National Park Right Horseriding at Centennial Park*TOP 10 Outdoor Activities*1 Swimming & Surfing

Sydney has dozens of beaches and most are safe for swimming. The harbour beaches are generally calm, good for a relaxing paddle and for children. The ocean beaches (see pp48–9) are likely to have a rougher swell, perfect for surfing, body-boarding and body-surfing; you can take lessons at Let's Go Surfing. At ocean beaches, make sure to swim between the flags, in the lifeguard-patrolled area. ☎ Let's Go Surfing: Map H5 • 128 Ramsgate Ave, North Bondi • 9365 1800 • www.letsgosurfing.com.au

2 Kayaking

Get up close to Middle Harbour's mansions by kayaking around the foreshore. While the more energetic prefer to join the fast-paced traffic of the harbour, others can slowly drift along simply admiring the view. ☎ Sydney Harbour Kayaks: Map U3 • The Spit Bridge, Mosman • 9960 4389 • www.sydneyharbourkayaks.com.au

3 Cycling

There are dedicated cycle tracks in Centennial Park and in streets throughout Sydney. 2 Kids' Deck

The National Maritime Museum (see p42) runs Kids' Deck, a programme of creative activities for children aged 5 to 12. With events often linked to current exhibitions, kids might build their own ships or dress up. There are also regular activity sessions during school holidays and Mini Mariners sessions with story-times for pre-schoolers on Thursdays. Kids' Deck: every Sun 11am–3pm • Adm

3 Culture Vultures

The Art Gallery of New South Wales (see p24–5) has an extensive program of events for children of all ages. School holidays are peak times with special performances and workshops. There are kids' art classes once a month and Fundays on most Sundays, at 2:30pm, at which children might find themselves giggling at a mime artist or discovering Aboriginal art and culture.

4 Imax Theatre

The eight-storey-high screen and 15,000 watt digital surround sound system will have kids pinned to their seats, or jumping out of them, as the case may be. This Darling Harbour icon with the distinctive black-and-yellow chequerboard façade presents 2D and IMAX 3D films. State-of-the-art electronic headsets with infrared sensors have replaced the quaint 1950s cardboard glasses that parents might recall from their youth. Map L4 • 9281 3300 • www.imax.com.au

6 Centennial Park

This parkland (see p50) has two main attractions for kids: a designated cycle path near Alison Road, and the Equestrian Centre on Lang and Robertson Roads (see p54). The Centre runs tours for children and conducts hand-held pony rides. Centennial Park Cycles rents bikes and helmets for younger riders.

7 Kids at the House

This excellent program at the Sydney Opera House (see pp8–11) introduces children to the world of performance art. The Babies and Family proms acquaint kids aged two to nine with musical forms, often through interactive performances. Older children can enjoy Australian and international theatre at venues such as The Studio.

8 Storytime Readings

Children under five who fancy some downtime can attend Preschool Storytime sessions at the Balmain Library.

- Darling St, Balmain • 9367 9211
- Sessions: 11am Thu

9 Fishing on the Harbour

One of the best spots to drop a line is at the Ives Steps Wharf, just under the Sydney Harbour Bridge west of Dawes Point Park (see p13). This is a popular haunt for chatty older anglers who are happy to share their knowledge with children.

- Ives Steps Wharf

10 Discovering Nature and Culture

The Australian Museum (see p42) is the place for youngsters that are curious about the world around them. The museum offers unique tours, workshops and activities for children of all ages. Kids might take part in a mini dinosaur dig, get up close to spiders or explore the museum by torchlight after dark. Visit <http://australianmuseum.net.au> for further information on child-centred activities at the museum.

City Centre

SYDNEYSIDERS WORK HARD AND PLAY HARD. And there's no better place to see them in action than the city centre, which is a manic tide of shoppers, opinionated taxi drivers, daredevil cyclists and bicycle couriers, and office workers talking furiously into their mobile phones as they power-walk to their next appointment. The city centre is surrounded by Circular Quay, The Rocks, the Botanic Gardens, the Domain, Central Station, Darling Harbour and Chinatown. Within this precinct you'll find historic sites and buildings sandwiched between chi-chi boutiques, $2 shops, groovy bars and restaurants, elegant Victorian shopping arcades and a host of entertainment venues. While it's easy to get caught up in the flow, don't forget to stop every once in a while to enjoy the architecture or the numerous street performers.

1 Museum of Sydney
 This stunning museum (see p42) occupies the site of Australia's first Government House, a prefabricated structure that was shipped over with the First Fleet in 1788. That structure was demolished in 1846, but some of its original footings are still visible through glass panels set into the floor. The museum places the history of white settlement against the Aboriginal custodianship of the land. The museum's plaza features Edge of the Trees (see p47), an installation and soundscape which explores Aboriginal history and culture.

2 Martin Place
 Martin Place runs from the General Post Office on George Street uphill to Macquarie Street. The 1891 GPO was designed by James Barnet (see p85) and built over the Tank Stream (see p18). Check out the amusing characters above the Pitt Street colonnade (see walk, p79) and the grand 1912 Commonwealth Bank Head Office. The bank's equally impressive 1928 sibling resides just up the hill. Opposite the GPO is the striking 1925 Neo-Classical National Australia Bank, and the Cenotaph commemorating Australia's war heroes. ☉ Map N3

Cenotaph at Martin Place

3 St Mary's Cathedral
 One of the world's largest Gothic Revival churches, the original 1833 structure of this cathedral was destroyed by a fire in 1865. Its replacement was designed by William Wardell and work began on it the same year. The twin spires, which featured in Wardell's original plans, were completed in 2000. The design of the magnificent terrazzo floor in the crypt is based on the Story of Creation and the Book of Kells. A historical exhibition is open year round. ☉ Map N4 • 9220 0400

4 Sydney Tower
 This 305-m (1,000-ft) icon offers 360-degree views over the Sydney region. The turret has revolving restaurants, a coffee shop and an observation deck. Above this is a 162,000-litre (35,500-gallon) water tank that acts as a stabilizer on windy days. The tower offers two attractions – Skywalk, an adrenaline-filled 45-minute guided walk around the roof with incredible views of the city and OzTrek, a virtual reality ride across Australia with 180-degree cinema screens, 3D holographic imagery and real-motion seating. ☉ Map M4 • Podium Level, 100 Market St • 9333 9222 • Tower & OzTrek: 9am–10:30pm daily (to 11:30pm Sat) • Skywalk: 9am–10pm daily • Adm

Queen Victoria's Dog

A statue of Queen Victoria and a wishing well stand at the QVB's main entrance. As you approach, a recorded voice recounts the story of Queen Victoria's favourite terrier, Islay, who was "granted the power of speech" for helping deaf and blind children. And what a voice! Islay's story is told by none other than Sydney's "Golden Tonsils", retired radio shock-jock John Laws.

5 Strand Arcade

Although Melbournians will disagree, this may be Australia's most impressive Victorian-era glass-roofed shopping arcade. Designed by John Spencer and opened in 1892, this quiet and elegant arcade (see p80) is home to boutiques, jewellers, tailors, coffee shops and groovy home-ware stores such as Funkis and Dinosaur Designs (see p81). Pressed-metal stairs and quaint lifts service the three levels and there is a seating area at the western end of the upper levels where you can enjoy a cup of tea overlooking the shoppers below. ☎ Map M3 • 412–414 George St • 9232 4199 • www.strandarcade.com.au

Baroque foyer of the State Theatre

6 State Theatre

Originally a cinema with over-the-top Gothic, Baroque and Art Deco elements, this 1929 National Trust-classified "Palace of Dreams" was designed by Henry White, who also worked on the Capitol Theatre (see p29). Sweeping staircases embrace its lavish Grand Assembly foyer, and the massive 20,000-piece Koh-i-Nor chandelier dominates the 2,000-seat auditorium. Since 1974, this theatre has been the premier venue for the Sydney Film Festival (see p73). During the year it presents live acts and musical performances, which have included Bette Midler and kd lang. ☎ Map M4 • 49 Market St • 9373 6655 • www.statetheatre.com.au • Guided tours, call to book • Adm

7 Anzac Memorial

Mirrored in Hyde Park's Pool of Reflection is this 1934 Art Deco monument built to commemorate Australia's WWI dead (see p36). It now records the sacrifices made by thousands of Australians in subsequent conflicts. The Hall of Memory is on the upper level, overlooking Raynor Hoff's moving statue, and the Hall of Silence is on the ground floor. A small museum on the ground floor features photographs and artifacts. ☎ Map N5 • Hyde Park: 9267 7668 • Open 9am–5pm daily

Façade of the Queen Victoria Building

8 Queen Victoria Building
 The five-storey Romanesque QVB (see p80) staggers visitors with its beautiful tiled floors, elegant staircases, stained glass, barrel-vaulted glass ceiling and copper domed roof. Built on the site of the old Sydney markets, this landmark was designed by George McRae and opened to applause in 1898. Today, the QVB houses local and international fashion brands. Map M4

9 Town Hall
 John Henry Wilson originally designed Sydney's civic headquarters in 1868. The front steps of this Victorian building, with its 1884 clock tower, elegant 1877 vestibule and grand 1889 Centennial Hall, have been a favourite meeting place for Sydneysiders since the original porte cochère facing George Street was removed in 1934. 10 St Andrew's Cathedral
 Australia's oldest Gothic Revival cathedral was designed in 1868 by Edmund Blaket, who also designed St Stephen's (see p103). It contains many memorials to Sydney pioneers, such as the 19th-century merchant-prince Thomas Mort, a major figure in the history of Sydney's harbour. Map M4 • Sydney Square • 9265 1661

A Walk from Circular Quay to the QVB

Morning

From Circular Quay (see p18) follow Loftus Street to Macquarie Park, exhibiting the anchor from the First Fleet HMS Sirius. Across the road is the 1876 Lands Department Building, seat of early European land ownership. Its façade features statues of explorers, including Ludwig Leichhardt and Major Thomas Mitchell. Head to Martin Place via George Street and check out the GPO's Pitt Street colonnade with characters representing trades, professions and industries, then sneak a peek through the windows of Martin Place's grand banks. Turn right into Macquarie Street (see p22), taking care not to bump into one of the city's "wigs", for this is Sydney's legal district. At Hyde Park (see p50), note the lovely Art Deco Archibald Fountain and wander down the glorious avenue of fig trees to Park Street. Turn right and take a seat outside the classy Bambini Trust Café at 185 Elizabeth Street. Sample an antipasto while you peruse the Specials menu and the passers-by.

Afternoon

Head to Market Street and turn left: Sydney Tower is one block down on your right and the Pitt Street Mall (see p80) two blocks down. Turn into the mall and left into the Strand Arcade and it's time for a caffeine fix at Elixir Espresso. Exit at George Street and turn left. On the next corner is the QVB where you can spend the rest of the afternoon happily window-shopping.

Kings Cross & Darlinghurst

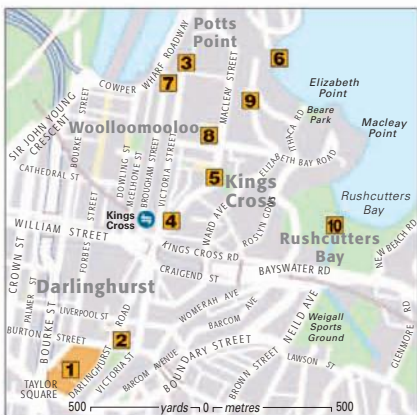

THE REPUTATION OF "THE CROSS" as a hotbed of sex and decadence may be well earned, but behind this red-light district's resident junkies and prostitutes is an interesting suburb with a rich bohemian history. Cool cafés and great Art Deco apartment buildings make up its backstreets. To the north, you'll find Potts Point with its fine Colonial villas and Victorian terrace houses, and to the east the solid middle-class enclaves of Rushcutter's Bay and Elizabeth Bay, named after Mrs Macquarie (see p20). Darlinghurst is far more hip than its northern neighbour, with a heady parade of groovers and wannabes competing with the suburb's less well-heeled residents. To the northwest is East Sydney, with its "Little Italy" centred around Stanley Street, and to the north Woolloomooloo or "the Loo", a former docklands precinct with an energetic mix of public housing estates and smart apartments.

Old Darlinghurst Gaol

1 Darlinghurst Court House & Old Darlinghurst Gaol

Mortimer Lewis designed the central section of this Greek Revival court house in 1844, and James Barnet (see p99) designed the side wings in 1880. The 1841 Old Darlinghurst Gaol behind the court house was also designed by Mortimer Lewis and added to by James Barnet. In its early years, public hangings were conducted inside the gaol. In 1914 it became an internment facility for WWI "enemy aliens". Following WWII almost 30,000 Holocaust survivors migrated to Australia, many of them settling in Sydney. This museum (see p42) explores Australian Jewish history through recordings of survivors, audio-visual displays and photographs. The ground floor deals with Jewish life following white settlement, and the upper levels focus on the Holocaust, whose survivors act as guides. 📍 Map P5 • 148 Darlinghurst Rd, Darlinghurst • 9360 7999 • Open 10am–4pm Sun–Thur, 10am–2pm Fri • Adm • www.sydneyjewishmuseum.com.au

3 Victoria Street

This leafy stretch of Victorian terrace houses in Potts Point was a major flashpoint during the 1970s Green Bans (see p37). Pressure to demolish the terraces to make way for high-rise developments was resisted by residents and Juanita Nielsen, the local community newspaper publisher. On 4 July 1975, Nielsen attended a meeting at the Carousel Club in nearby Kings Cross; she was never seen again. Nobody in Sydney has any doubt as to the motive of her killer or killers. 📍 Map P3

4 Darlinghurst Road

Darlinghurst Road runs from the court house to the El Alamein Fountain. "The Wall", a sandstone wall running beside the gaol, is a nocturnal beat for male prosti-tutes. The pleasant Green Park is thought to be named after a former hangman at the gaol, Alexander "The Strangler" Green. Beyond the park is a colourful strip of terrace houses, hotels and cafés that ends at William Street. In the 1920s and 30s the area beyond William Street had some bohemian charm, but since WWII it has been Australia's most notorious red-light district. 📍 Map P4

Mr Eternity

During the Depression, a near-illiterate, reformed alcoholic took to writing "Eternity" in perfect copperplate script on pavements across the city. Arthur Stace thought he'd received instructions from God while at the Baptist Church in Darlinghurst, and he wrote the word "Eternity" half a million times before his death in 1967. An aluminium plaque in tribute to Stace can be found near the Sydney Square waterfall.

5 El Alamein Fountain

This dandelion-shaped fountain in the Fitzroy Gardens is especially pleasant when illuminated at night. Though many consider it overrated, it is still probably Sydney's most popularly known public artwork. Designed by Robert Woodward in 1961, it commemorates the participation of Australian soldiers in the Battle of El Alamein in Egypt during WWII, which precipitated Germany's defeat in North Africa.

6 Elizabeth Bay

A world away from the seediness of nearby Kings Cross, Elizabeth Bay's narrow, winding streets are packed with apartment buildings, including Art Deco gems such as Del Rio on Billyard Avenue, near Elizabeth Bay House. It is also home to several harbourside mansions, including Boomerang (see p15), and nearby Berthong, which Russell Crowe owned before moving up to the industrial chic of the Woolloomooloo Finger Wharf. The tiny Arthur McElhone Reserve (see p51), is overlooked by 100 apartment balconies, but the unpretentious Beare Park can be found just down the hill, on the harbour's edge. 📍 Map Q3

7 The McElhone Stairs

These stone stairs link Woolloomooloo Bay with Potts Point and The Cross. Near the bottom of the stairs on Cowper Wharf Road is Harry's Café de Wheels, a pie cart that's been a Sydney late-night institution for over 50 years. Its walls are festooned with photos of famous patrons, mostly politicians and pop stars, tucking into meat pies. Nearby is the Woolloomooloo Finger Wharf (see p15), which houses upmarket bars and restaurants. 📍 Map P3

8 Tusculum & Rockwall Villas

"Villa conditions" were actually established in the 1830s to ensure that the hillside overlooking Woolloomooloo Bay attracted the "right sort": All new houses had to face Government House (see p21), cost a fortune, and be approved by the governor of the day. John Verge designed both Tusculum and Rockwall. The Australian Institute of Architects now occupies the former, which has a great bookshop specialising in architectural titles. Rockwall is a private residence originally built for engineer John Busby, whose bore delivered Sydney's first permanent fresh water supply. 📍 Map Q4 • Tusculum: 3 Manning St, Potts Point • Bookshop: Open 9am–5:30pm Mon–Fri, 10am–4pm Sat • Rockwall: Macleay St, Potts Point

9 Elizabeth Bay House

Alexander Macleay, Colonial Secretary of NSW from 1825 to 1837, had architect John Verge design this residence for his large family in 1839. Macleay was also a distinguished botanist and the first president of the Australian Museum. This Greek Revival residence is said to contain the finest example of a Colonial interior anywhere in Australia. Macleay's family subdivided the original 23 ha (56 acres) of land following his death. In 1941 the house was further divided into 15 apartments. The NSW government purchased the property in the 1960s and the Historic Houses Trust undertook major restoration. It finally reopened as a museum in 1977.

10 Rushcutters Bay Park
Rushcutters Bay, now the mooring of choice for some of Sydney's finest yachts and the home of the Cruising Yacht Club, was the site of one of the settlers' first run-ins with the local Eora people, on 30 May 1788. The Eora speared two convicts, who were collecting rushes for roof thatching after having stolen a fishing canoe. Today, this pleasant park contains tennis courts, a quaint picket-fenced cricket ground and stadium, lovely Moreton Bay fig trees and a pleasant kiosk and café. The park is much loved by both locals and their poodles. 📍 Map Q4

Afternoon Meander Through Kings Cross

📍 Begin at the El Alamein Fountain. Walk down Macleay Street and you'll pass the Red Hotel, site of Sydney's first gay bar in the 1940s, the Bottoms Up. Turn into Greenknowe Avenue and walk down the hill and left into leafy Ithaca Road, where you'll catch glimpses of the harbour. Beare Park is tucked between the high-rise apartments. From the wharf there's a good view of Boomerang, the Spanish Mission mansion. Walk up Billyard Avenue to Elizabeth Bay House, passing the Del Rio, another Californian Spanish Mission building. Steps on Onslow Avenue will bring you back up the hill to Macleay Street.

📍 Turning right, stroll down to Yellow Bistro (see p89). Have a coffee and a sweet treat on the porch.

Refreshed, walk down Challis Avenue into Embarkation Park for great views of the Naval Base at Woolloomooloo. Continue up Victoria Street, past the terrace houses to Hughes Street. Turn left into the Tusculum Street, and then Manning Street. Next door to Tusculum Villa, the Werrington and the Wychbury are some of the best Art Deco buildings in the Cross.

📍 On your way back up Macleay Street, pop into Orwell Street to see the old Metro Theatre, where a nightclub roared in the 1930s. Finish up your afternoon tour with a drink at the Bourbon, a very stylishly revamped Kings Cross dive bar.

Paddington & Surry Hills

BACK IN THE 1960S, Paddington's neglected Victorian charms were rediscovered by "trendies" who zealously set about restoring the area's terraces. Most of Paddington's working-class residents took fright and fled to suburbs far away. Now mostly white-collar families occupy the renovated terraces, and this hilly district, bordered by Centennial Park, Moore Park, Darlinghurst and the Eastern Suburbs, is one of Sydney's smartest addresses.

Victorian "Iron Lace" detailing

Its main strip, Oxford Street, is a window-shopper's heaven and its backstreets a delight for anyone who loves Victorian architecture. Surry Hills' charms took a little longer to be appreciated, but now this suburb rivals Darlinghurst and Newtown as one of the grooviest districts in Sydney. But it wasn't always so. During the Great Depression, Surry Hills was one of Sydney's most notorious slums and the haunt of razor gang queen Kate Leigh (see p37). This dark period in its history was perfectly captured by the writer Ruth Park (see p41).

1 Victorian Terrace Houses

Many of Paddington's lovely terrace houses, with their narrow frontages, iron-work verandas and pocket-handkerchief gardens, were erected following the construction of the Victoria Barracks (see p92) in the 1840s. The area went into decline during 1931's Great Depression, but an influx of migrants revitalised the area after WWII. Many of those migrants moved out following the suburb's gentrification in the 1960s and '70s. Some of the most interesting examples of the Victorian terrace style are found in Glenmore and Jersey Roads, and Cascade, Liverpool, Windsor and Paddington Streets.

2 Paddington Markets

These just might be Sydney's best loved weekend markets. They're held every Saturday in the shaded grounds of Paddington Village's St John's Uniting Church. Ever since 1973, this alfresco bazaar has been a great place to shop for jewellery, crafts, fashion, pottery, soaps, second-hand clothing and the like. It's always had a New Age bent, so you're also likely to find someone who can massage those travel-weary shoulders, read your tarot cards or fine-tune your chakras. 3 Paddington Town Hall

This Classical Revival Town Hall on Oxford Street was designed by J Kemp, a local architect who won an international competition to design a civic centre that matched the suburb's increasing status. The main building was completed in 1891, and the clock tower that now dominates was added several years later. The hall underwent extensive restoration work in the 1990s and is no longer used by the council. But it does house the suburb's library, offices, and a radio station. It is also a regular venue for private functions and corporate events. Map Q6

4 Juniper Hall

Robert Cooper (1776–1857) was one of Sydney's more successful emancipists and a self-confessed smuggler. Originally sent down for receiving stolen goods, Cooper made a small fortune as Sydney's first distiller, specialising in gin flavoured with juniper berries: hence the name of this residence. Situated diagonally opposite the Town Hall, Juniper Hall was built in 1824 to house his 28 children from three marriages. The house was threatened with demolition for several years, but finally spared in the 1980s and restored by the National Trust. Map Q6

5 Victoria Barracks
 Occupying 12 ha (30 acres), these barracks were built between 1841 and 1848. They are immediately recognisable from Oxford Street by their high sandstone walls; many regard this complex of late Georgian buildings as one of the finest military barracks in the world. The architect was Major George Barney, who also designed Fort Denison (see p38). Until 1870 the barracks were home to British troops; today they are an Australian Army facility. The Army Museum is housed in the former military prison and contains several interesting exhibits tracing the military heritage of New South Wales.  Map P6

6 Oxford & Crown Streets
 Despite past upheavals, Oxford Street has reclaimed its reputation as Sydney's most fashion-conscious shopping strip with distinctive boutiques. Although it runs all the way from Hyde Park to Bondi Junction, the prime shopping drag is on the north side of the road between Barcom Avenue and Queen Street (see p97), which runs down to Woollahra. Surry Hills' Crown Street is less conspicuous and polished than its northern rival, but it's gaining a reputation as a good spot to source homewares, designer and retro furniture and fashion items. It has some great cafés, ethnic restaurants and grocers, pubs and factory outlets.

Sydney Cricket Ground

7 Sydney Cricket Ground
 Stationed at Victoria Barracks in 1851, the British Army were told to take their bats and balls and entertain themselves on the empty land south of the barracks. Ever since, this site (see p53) has been the spiritual home for millions of cricket-mad Sydneysiders. In January 1928, fans saw Sir Donald Bradman's first-class cricket debut here. The venue has also hosted concerts by the Rolling Stones, Madonna and Green Day, as well as Australian Rules Football matches. Tours allow visitors into the dressing rooms and on to the hallowed turf.

8 Sydney Football Stadium
 Designed by Phillip Cox, this stadium (see pp47 & 53) was completed in 1988 to coincide with Australia's Bicentenary. The ground was ostensibly designed for Sydney's preferred football code, Rugby League, but it has occasionally permitted upstarts from the southern code, Australian Rules, to take to the field. Soccer was played here during the 2000 Sydney Olympics and has now become a regular event. The Stadium has also held several concert performances, which have included shows by U2, Robbie Williams and Barbra Streisand. 🗺️ Tour Experience tours of Sydney Football Stadium, SCG and Cricket Museum: 1300 724 737 • 10am, noon & 2pm Mon–Fri, 10am Sat • Adm

9 The Entertainment Quarter

This massive entertainment complex houses a variety of restaurants including Chinese, traditional Italian, the Bavarian Bier Café and modern Australian dining. Entertainment options include two movie complexes, bowling, pool, karaoke, a Comedy Store and three pubs. Late night shopping is open every night in an open-air area. There are two kids' playgrounds and two child entertainment venues. The Entertainment Quarter is also home to two of the best markets in Sydney, The EQ Farmers' Market and Sydney's Bent Street Bazaar merchandise market.

10 Whiteley Studio

Tucked down a Surry Hills backstreet, the former studio of artist Brett Whiteley (see pp26 & 44) is now a public museum and art gallery. Whiteley painted some of Sydney's most iconic works. He loved the harbour and the nude, and both feature in his paintings. In 1985 he converted this former factory into a studio but, just seven years later, he was found dead from a heroin overdose in a motel room in the south coast township of Thirroul. The gallery has regular exhibitions and displays the artist's studio much as it was before he died.

A Morning Stroll Through Paddington

From the Darlinghurst Court House (see p85) follow Oxford Street as far as the imposing sandstone walls of Victoria Barracks. Turn left into Glenmore Road, which has a cluster of small but classy boutiques. Gipps Street leads to Liverpool Street, which is a winding road of elegant double-storey terraces reminiscent of some of London's wealthier Victorian districts. Hogarth Galleries (see p45), is down Walker Lane. Rejoin Glenmore Road and follow this winding and busy thoroughfare to Five Ways, a quaint little intersection with several good cafés, including Gusto.

After coffee and a snack, head up Broughton Street to the narrow laneway and steps on your left. At the bottom of the lane turn right and walk down to steep Cascade Street. Turn right and walk uphill past Windsor Street's incredibly narrow terraces to Paddington Street. Follow this elegant fig tree-lined avenue up to Jersey Road, passing Tim Olsen Gallery (see p45) and several of Sydney's premier addresses en route. Turn right into Jersey Road, then into narrow Caledonia Street, which leads back to McGarvie Street where several eccentric balconies overhang the narrow pavement. Turn into Underwood Street and you'll find the London Tavern, happy to serve you a well-earned drink. The pub has a superb bistro attached and is located near William Street, which also has several boutiques.

Eastern Suburbs

IF YOU'VE GOT THE MONEY this is a fantastic place to buy real estate, especially on the harbour. In Colonial times, some of Sydney's wealthiest citizens built country estates on these north-facing slopes overlooking the water. These were later subdivided, but the Eastern Suburbs remain leafy, manicured and ever-so-well spoken. With exclusive private schools, million-dollar marinas, golf clubs and more salons and day spas than you can count, the Eastern Suburbs are absolutely "gorgeous". There are several idyllic harbourside beaches and swimming pools, and numerous harbourside and parkland walking options. If you're lucky, you might even spot the rare and endangered "blue-rinse", a hairstyle once favoured by Eastern Suburbs dowagers that could almost qualify as a heritage-listed feature. If spending money is your thing, rest assured: where there's money, there's shopping. And the Eastern Suburbs have some prime retail strips, especially in Woollahra and Double Bay.

1 Queen Street

You won't find any rustic treasures in the antiques shops that line this leafy street downhill from Paddington's Oxford Street. Items here are super expensive, such as Louis XIV clocks, original Colonial prints, 18th-century Persian rugs, and estate jewellery. Even if your wallet is drained, it's still a fun place to window-shop and there are some excellent cafés nearby. Map F5

2 Double Bay

The immense wealth of "Double Pay" is almost a joke; people call it the plastic surgery capital of Australia. To the west is exclusive Darling Point, where you'll find Major Mitchell's (see p79) former harbourside residence on Carthona Avenue. To the east is Point Piper, which was home to Sir Lawrence Hargrave (see p31) from 1902 to 1915. In between is Steyne Park and the delightful Redleaf Pool, just below the lovely Blackburn Gardens on New South Head Road. William Street, Bay Street and New South Head Road border the main shopping precinct, where you'll find all the best international retail stores. Map F4

3 Rose Bay

The largest cove in Sydney Harbour is embraced by Point Piper to the west and Vaucluse to the east. Northeast of Point Piper is Shark Island (see p15). To the east is Hermit Point, reputedly the haunt of a reclusive former convict. In 1942 a Japanese submarine lobbed shells into Rose Bay, presumably aiming for the former flying-boat base; it's still the base for Sydney Harbour's seaplanes (see p17). If you've followed New South Head Road over from Double Bay, you'll enjoy the walk along the waterfront from Rose Bay Park to Lyne Park. Map G4

4 Nielsen Park

Part of Sydney Harbour National Park, Nielsen Park (see p51) makes its way from winding Vaucluse Road down to Shark Bay, so named for the sharks caught here in the days before shark nets. In the centre of the park is the Mt Trefle Walk, and near the beach are changing pavilions, a great kiosk, Greycliffe House (see p98) and a memorial to the Harbour Foreshore Vigilance Committee (see p15). The Hermitage Foreshore Walk starts west of Shark Beach, and offers some of the best views of Sydney as it meanders along the shoreline back to Rose Bay via Hermit Point. Don't forget your swimsuit.

Snakes Alive

The lush grounds of Vaucluse House (see p98) owe a debt of gratitude to Sir Henry Browne Hayes. This Irish baronet, exiled for kidnapping a Quaker heiress, was so petrified of snakes that he imported tons of turf blessed by St Patrick in an effort to rid his 205-ha (508-acre) estate of the scaly vermin.

5 Greycliffe House
 After WC Wentworth's (see p37 & below) daughter was married, her husband commissioned the architect John Hilly to construct this Gothic residence. However, the couple left for England before its 1851 completion. It later became a home for mothers and babies, before the NSW government purchased the property in 1911. The ground floor is now open to the public, while the NPWS (see p14) occupies the rest of the building. 📍 Map G2 • Nielsen Park

Vaucluse House

7 Watsons Bay
 Named after Robert Watson, the quartermaster on the HMS Sirius (see p79), this bay has been the base for Sydney Harbour's pilot boats since the 1800s. Uphill from Robertson Park are the Greycliffe Memorial Gates, which commemorate the 41 people who lost their lives when the ferry Greycliffe went down in 1927. 📍 Map H1

8 Camp Cove & South Head
 Just north of Watsons Bay is Camp Cove, where Governor Phillip spent the night after decamping from Botany Bay (see pp36 & 38) and entered Port Jackson for the first time. A track leads from the kiosk at the northern end of this protected beach over to tiny male-nudist Lady Bay Beach, which is overlooked by the HMAS Watson Naval Base. At the end of the track is South Head's Hornby Lighthouse and several old gun emplacements (see p51). This windswept headland offers spectacular views out to sea, across to Manly and the North Harbour. 📍 Map H1

9 The Gap

Perhaps Sydney's most infamous headland, this bluff, overlooking the ocean and the wave-lashed rocks far below, has seen more than its fair share of suicides. South of The Gap is the resting anchor of the Dunbar (see p36) and further south again is Jacob's Ladder: the sole survivor of the 1857 Dunbar tragedy was hauled to safety up this cleft in the rocks. Further south again is the signal station that has been monitoring shipping in and out of Sydney Harbour since 1848. Map H1

Macquarie Lighthouse

10 Macquarie Lighthouse

Australia's longest continuously operating lighthouse stands on the windswept clifftops of Vaucluse. The original lighthouse, built between 1816 and 1818, was designed by noted convict architect Francis Greenway (see p23). It was the first of many projects Greenway completed for Governor Macquarie, earning him a conditional pardon. Within 60 years of its construction the eroded tower was held together with iron bands and in 1883 a new lighthouse was built by architect James Barnet (see p85) to closely resemble the original. The tower is open to the public every two months.

An Eastern Suburbs Stroll

Morning

Catch the Bondi Explorer or a 325 bus from Circular Quay (see p18) and get off at Nielsen Park. It's a short walk downhill to Greycliffe House and Shark Beach. When you're ready, walk back to Vaucluse Road, which becomes Wentworth Road. The entrance to Vaucluse House is further down on the right. Continue along Wentworth and take the first right into Chapel Road. WC Wentworth's gloomy mausoleum is just up the hill on your left. Steps lead from behind the mausoleum to Fitzwilliam Street. Turn right and walk downhill to the lane on your left, which takes you across the Parsley Bay suspension footbridge. Take the steps on your left leading up to The Crescent and follow this around until you reach Palmerston Street, which leads to Watsons Bay Pilot Station. Follow Marine Parade north to the ferry wharf where you can get fish and chips.

Afternoon

After lunch, walk to Short Street at the end of the beach, turn immediately left into Cove Street, and then left again into Pacific Street. This leads up to Green Point overlooking Camp Cove. After enjoying a swim here, or at the nudist Lady Bay Beach further on, follow the path along the clifftops to South Head. Retrace your steps and catch the ferry from Watsons Bay back to Circular Quay, or the bus from Hopetoun Avenue.

Newtown & Glebe

SOME TIME AGO, Newtown didn't even register a blip on the tourist radar. But a trendy crowd has given this suburb the raffish charm that several other suburbs have lost since falling victim to Sydney's relentless inner-city gentrification. It's still a bit rough around the edges, which makes it a great place to shop for funky clothes, books and retro furnishings, and it has some groovy cafés. Glebe, on the other hand, is almost the grand dame of gentrified inner-city suburbs. In 1789, Governor Phillip granted the chaplain of the First Fleet, Reverend Richard Johnson, 162 ha (400 acres) for services rendered. Today, Glebe accommodates workers' cottages and impressive 19th-century residences on tree-lined streets that meander down to the harbour. It is also home to numerous cafés and restaurants, an arthouse cinema, and Sydney's best bookshop Gleebooks, as well as pleasant harbourside parks and the ever-popular Glebe Markets.

1 Sydney Park

The entrance to Sydney Park is marked by four giant chimneys once used for the huge kilns of the Sydney brickworks. Clever park landscaping incorporated parts of the brick works, so that you walk over a courtyard paved with hand-moulded bricks. The grassy slopes of the park make it a favourite with local dog-walkers and offer a wonderful view of the city from the hills. It is a welcome wide open space, rare in Sydney. 📍 Map C6
• Sydney Park Rd & King St, St Peters

2 King Street

Originally known as Cooks River Road, King Street has been an important thoroughfare since the days of European settlement, when it linked Sydney Town with farms in the Cooks River Basin. Newtown once belonged to a few rich men, but by the late 1800s it had become a thriving township. By then King Street looked much as it does today, bustling and lined with shops. Many stately homes on the streets off King Street have been restored, but most of the houses began as poor workers' cottages. Migrants arrived in the 1960s and '70s, along with rockers, goths and punks, and Newtown is still peopled by an eclectic mix. Above the grungy street level, you'll see that the upper façades of many shopfronts have retained Victorian plasterwork detail. 📍 Map C5

3 Camperdown Cemetery

Sydney's oldest remaining cemetery lies in the grounds of St Stephen's Church. When the cemetery was established in 1848, it was one of three serving all of Sydney. Many historic figures are buried here, including

Alexander Macleay (see p86), Colonial Secretary from 1826 to 1837. When the Dunbar sank just outside Sydney Heads in 1857 (see p36), the bodies recovered were buried in a mass grave at Camperdown and a memorial was erected for them. Eliza Donnithorne, thought to be the inspiration for Charles Dickens' Miss Havisham, also lies there. While walking the peaceful paths, note the gravestones lining the walls. These original stones were moved inside when the outer area was turned into a park. 📍 Map B5 • Church St, Newtown

4 Sydney University

Australia's first university was founded in 1850. Many of the buildings on the large campus are of little architectural merit, but the Main Quadrangle building makes the university well worth a visit. Designed to mimic the hallowed halls of Oxford and Cambridge, its ornate Victorian Gothic façade is adorned with gargoyles and pinnacles. The Nicholson Museum of antiquities is housed in one wing, and the Macleay Museum is also close by (see p43). 📍 Map C5

5 Glebe Point Road

Glebe came about as a series of land grants to wealthy free settlers. Two remaining Regency villas, Toxteth Park and Lyndhurst, were designed by celebrated Colonial architect John Verge. Today it is a hippie enclave characterised by New Age and health food shops and laidback locals. Leafy and settled into hills with harbour views, the area has a village atmosphere. Glebe Point Road runs through the centre, from Broadway up to the water at Jubilee Point, and is lined with shops and cafés.

To experience Glebe's bohemian side, pop into Sappho bookshop and café for a latte then head to the Excelsior pub for some eclectic live gigs.

6 Glebe Markets

Every Saturday from 10am–4pm, the grounds of Glebe Public School are used by market stalls selling new and second-hand clothes, records and bric-a-brac. A great source for flares, leather jackets and sunglasses, Glebe Markets offer great bargains. 📍 Map K6

Sze Yup Buddhist Chinese Temple

7 Sze Yup Buddhist Chinese Temple

Sydney saw its first influx of Chinese immigrants soon after the discovery of gold in the 1850s. The city's Chinese community, the largest in Australia, built this temple on the site of a former market garden in 1898. It is named after a district in the Chinese province of Kwongtung. The traditional red and green

Incense burning at the temple

temple was restored in 1978 and the archway added in 1982. The bones of the deceased were once kept here before their return to China for burial. Visitors are welcome, but do remember that this is an active place of worship and not a tourist attraction. 📍 Map B4 • Edward St • Open 9am–5pm daily

8 Jubilee, Bicentennial & Federal Parks

These three contiguous parks overlooking Rozelle Bay offer fantastic views of the city and the working harbour. A pathway follows the north shoreline overlooking the container terminal on the other side of Rozelle Bay. To the west, just over the footbridge, is a great children's playground. And to the south is the old railway viaduct which threads its way past the historic grandstand in Jubilee Park. The small Pope Paul VI Reserve has one of the best views in Sydney, looking across Blackwattle Bay to the Anzac and Sydney Harbour Bridges. 📍 Map B4

9 Anzac Bridge

This stunning bridge was named in honour of Australia's WWI soldiers: Anzac stands for Australian and New Zealand Army Corps. It spans narrow Johnstons Bay and links Pyrmont with Rozelle and Balmain (see p108). Opened in 1995, this is the longest cable-stayed span bridge in Australia, and many consider it Sydney's finest. A pedestrian path runs beside the inbound lanes and is accessible from Quarry Master Drive, north of the Sydney Fish Market. It offers great views of the city in the distance and the adjacent swing-span 1901 Glebe Island Bridge below.  Map J3

10 Sydney Fish Market

The largest market of its kind in the Southern Hemisphere, this complex in Pyrmont is home to the fishing fleet, wholesale and retail fish markets, delicatessens, oyster bars, sushi and sashimi bars, cafés, restaurants, and even a bakery. You can enjoy freshly cooked seafood in one of the restaurants, or have a picnic outside in the sunshine with takeaway fish and chips if you prefer. The Fish Market contains the Sydney Seafood School, which runs a range of culinary classes such as fileting and specialist ethnic cuisines.

Downhill From Newtown to Glebe

Morning

 Start your day in classic Newtown style with a strong coffee at Barmuda, 283 Australia Street. Then follow Australia Street to Lennox Street and turn right. At the end is St Stephen's Church, designed by Edmund Blacket (see p79). Beside the church is the entrance to the historic, peaceful Camperdown Cemetery. Soak up the Gothic atmosphere before heading back to hectic King Street. Check out the bookshops, cafés and funky clothing stores that run almost as far as Little Queen Street. Turn left, cross over Carillon Avenue and enter the manicured grounds of the Sydney University. Turn right into Physics Lane, left into Fisher Road, and right into Manning Road, reaching the archway that leads through to the Main Quadrangle. Pass beneath the Gothic Revival clock tower and wander down University Avenue to the open space of Victoria Park. Finally, head to bohemian Glebe Point Road to Badde Manors (see p107) for lunch.

Afternoon

Follow Glebe Point Road to Pendrill Street, turn left and follow the scent of incense downhill to the Sze Yup Temple. Turn right into Edward Street, left into Eglinton Lane, and right again into Edward Lane to reach Jubilee Park. The Pope Paul VI Reserve can be found in the northeast corner. When done, catch a 431 or 434 bus back to town.

Balmain & Leichhardt

WILLIAM BALMAIN, a surgeon on the First Fleet, was granted 223 ha (550 acres) west of the city in 1800, perhaps in gratitude for having tended to Governor Phillip following his 1790 spearing (see p38). The area was subdivided in the mid-1800s, and grand harbourside residences were erected alongside working-class stone and timber cottages and a multitude of pubs that catered to the employees of the local timber, mining and maritime industries. By the 1960s, Balmain had become a haven for writers, artists and actors, a reputation it still retains today.

Balmain war memorial

A café-junkshop in Balmain

Leichhardt's cultural connections are more tenuous. The suburb was named after the explorer Ludwig Leichhardt (see p79) who disappeared without a trace while crossing the continent in 1848; Patrick White (see p40) immortalised Leichhardt in his 1957 novel, Voss. Now Leichhardt is home to two diverse populations – Sydney's colourful "Little Italy" and a prominent lesbian community.

Saturday Balmain Markets at St Andrew's

1 Balmain East

At the eastern end of the Balmain peninsula is the Darling Street Wharf, overlooked by manicured Thornton Park. A sign tracing the route of the Balmain History Trail can be found near the bus stop. On Darling Street, check out the former Dolphin Hotel and the Waterman's Cottage. To the south, Peacock Point offers great views over Millers Point, Darling Harbour and the Anzac Bridge. Mort Bay Reserve to the north features two massive ships' propellers and views over the ferry and tugboat maintenance yards in Mort Bay. Map C3

2 Darling Street

Darling Street runs from the wharf in Balmain East to Victoria Road in Rozelle. It's a steady uphill climb from the wharf past narrow Victorian houses until you reach the friendly London Hotel, just before a large roundabout. En route you pass the childhood home of former New South Wales premier Neville Wran, No. 117, and the 1854 Watch House at No. 179, the oldest in Sydney. Find Gladstone Park past the roundabout, and St Andrew's across the road, which hosts the Balmain Markets every Saturday. From here on it's boutiques, cafés, bookshops and salons all the way to the Victorian court house, Town Hall, Fire Station and Library (see p57). Map B3

3 Elkington Park

This lovely reserve on White Horse Point, overlooking Cockatoo Island, is best known for the Dawn Fraser Baths, one of Sydney's oldest municipal pools, built in the 1880s. Dawn Fraser is a local legend, as much loved for her candid take on life and wild streak as she is for having dominated the pool at the 1956, 1960 and 1964 Olympic Games, leaving 41 world records in her wake. Including an outdoor saltwater tidal pool, the baths are open from October to April. Map B2 • Dawn Fraser Baths, Fitzroy Ave, Balmain • 9555 1903

4 Birchgrove

This area has some lovely Colonial homes, a small shopping village on Rowntree Street and Birchgrove Park, the site of Australia's first Rugby League match in 1908. The northern tip of Birchgrove is known as Yurulbin Point, formerly called Long Nose Point, which, along with Manns Point, forms the mouth of the Parramatta River. Yurulbin Park has spectacular views of the Harbour Bridge, and an interpretation board near the ferry wharf provides interesting details on the area's Aboriginal heritage. Map B2

Spaghetti Western

When the first Italians escaped war-torn Europe to arrive in Leichhardt in 1917, the area was largely populated by Irish free settlers. After WWII many more Italians were drawn by the availability of paid work, fine weather and peace. The Italians, who continued to pour in until the 1960s, introduced Sydneysiders to many new things, perhaps most importantly espresso and spaghetti.

The Leichhardt area once belonged to the Wangal tribe of indigenous people.

5 Cockatoo Island

Since European settlement, the largest of Sydney Harbour's islands has been used variously as a convict prison, granary, girls reformatory and a major shipyard. Convicts from the infamous Norfolk Island penal colony were quartered on the island until 1871. During that time only one prisoner, the bushranger nicknamed "Captain Thunderbolt" escaped, aided by his Aboriginal wife, Mary. Sutherland Dock was completed in 1890 and the island became a major shipyard. It also served as the naval dockyard for the Royal Australian Navy at the outbreak of World War I. The dockyards closed down in 1992 and the Sydney Harbour Federation Trust has opened the island to the public. The trust runs activities, events and tours on the island (see p15). 📍 Map B2

6 Goat Island

Northeast of Balmain, Goat Island was one of Bennelong's (see p9) favourite picnic spots. In the 1830s it was used as a gunpowder magazine and convict barracks. One prisoner, Charles "Bony" Anderson, tried numerous times to escape the barracks, receiving 1,200 lashes for his troubles. He was chained to a sandstone "couch" for two years. The island later became a base for the Water Police and Fire Brigade, and in 1925 shipyards were built on its western side. In the 1990s it was the film set for the TV series Water Rats. Boasting fantastic views of Sydney Harbour, the island is managed by the National Parks and Wildlife Service (see p14). 📍 Map C2

Leichhardt Post Office

Leichhardt Town Hall

7 Leichhardt Town Hall

Designed by Drake and Walcott and built in 1888, the style of this ornate building is described as Victorian Free Classical. The structure reflects the creativity and craftsmanship applied towards significant buildings of its time. When it opened, the Town Hall was considered the best municipal building outside the city centre. Many of the Italian migrants who settled in Leichhardt became Australian citizens in Town Hall ceremonies between 1920 and 1960. 📍 Map A5 • 107 Norton St

8 Leichhardt Post Office

Designed by James Barnet (see p77), Leichhardt Post Office is no longer in use, but it is possible to admire its strong lines and severe shape from the street. It is a good example of the Victorian Italianate style, popularised in Australia by architectural pattern books and used in many homes. The tower, designed to accommodate a clock that never arrived, provides a formal divide between the public and residential parts of the building. 📍 Map A4 • 109 Norton St

9 Norton Street

Named after James Norton, an English attorney who arrived in 1818 and established a thriving legal practice in the colony, Norton Street has long been the heart of this district. Much of the large estate purchased by Norton in 1834 is now the bustling shopping and dining strip that runs from Parramatta Road to Allen Street. You'll find a range of stores with an Italian flavour (see p62), from bridal fashion to books, clothing and shoes, as well as bakeries, delis and butchers. Map A4

10 Italian Forum

This kitsch development evokes reminiscences of Italy, and has a sundial and a statue of Dante based on a similar one in Verona. On the mezzanine level, you'll find boutiques selling imported and local Italian fashion. Descending the stairs finds the piazza, surrounded by cafés and restaurants that offer wonderful, sunny positions for languid lunches. Located on the piazza level is the Leichhardt Library which contains a Local History Section, a rich source of historical photographs and oral histories of the local Italian community. Map A5

A Balmain Stroll

Morning

Catch a ferry from Circular Quay (see p18) to the quaint Darling Street Wharf. Enter Illoura Reserve and walk south beneath she-oaks and other native trees to Peacock Point's views across to Darling Harbour (see p28). Johnston Street has great views of Anzac Bridge (see p105). Head back to Darling Street and admire some of Balmain's finest residences. Turn into Killeen Street and wander down through Ewenton Park. Around the corner is grand Hampton Villa overlooking the docklands, home of Sir Henry Parkes (see p37). Back at Darling Street, get a drink at the pleasant London Hotel. Then, window-shop all the way to the Town Hall. Finally, backtrack to Go Bungai at 333 Darling Street for the best Japanese lunch in town.

Afternoon

After lunch, continue back down Darling Street to Mort Street and turn left. At the end is Mort Bay Park, site of the former Mort's Dock shipyards, named for Thomas Mort (see p79), which is now open harbourside parkland. Follow the shoreline around to the steps leading up to Wharf Road via Ronald Street. This lovely street leads to Snails Bay and the historic Birchgrove Park. A path traces the shoreline to Louisa Road, which has some seriously expensive real estate. Turn right and head towards Yurulbin Park for some spectacular harbour views before catching the ferry back to Circular Quay.

The annual Italian Festa on Norton Street draws thousands of visitors every year for food, music and rides.

The North Shore

IF THE EASTERN SUBURBS ARE “gorgeous”, and the southern and western suburbs are “aspirational”, the North Shore is best described as “satisfied”. For many Sydneysiders the North Shore is not only geographical shorthand for the suburbs north of the harbour, it’s equally a state of mind. One that is respectable, well-off and content. From Hunters Hill in the west to Manly in the east, and all points north to Ku-ring-gai Chase National Park, the North Shore is bourgeois to the back teeth. Here you’ll find some glorious pockets of remnant bushland nestled around the harbour, stunning ocean beaches, quiet harbourside beaches, and plenty of options for those who love the great outdoors, walking, cycling, kayaking, surfing, diving, sailing and parasailing. And then there are always some of Sydney’s perennial favourites to tempt you: Luna Park, Nutcote, Taronga Park Zoo, Bradleys Head, Oceanworld Manly and North Head.

1 Balls Head Reserve

On the headland east of Manns Point and the Parramatta River (see p109) lies this pleasant park, site of Aboriginal rock art and bushwalking trails. It offers stunning views across the harbour to Goat Island (see p110) and Balmain (see p108). BBQ facilities are available, and it's easily accessible from Waverton Railway Station. The park is cradled by the dormitory suburbs of Waverton and Wollstoncraft, the latter named after Edward Wollstoncraft, nephew of Mary Wollstoncraft, the author of Rights of Women. Edward was an enterprising local merchant who operated a shipping business with his partner Alexander Berry, after whom the bay was named. 📍 Map C2

2 Lavender Bay & Blues Point

East of Berry's Bay, this cove has great views of the Opera House framed by the Harbour Bridge. It was named after George Lavender, a boatswain who married the daughter of his neighbour Billy Blue (see p37). In 1817 Governor Macquarie granted Billy Blue 32 ha (80 acres) west of Lavender Bay. In 1830, at the age of 82, Billy Blue established a ferry service from Dawes Point (see p13) to the headland that now bears his name. There is a small reserve at its end, but the point is dominated by a Harry Seidler (see p47) apartment building that many consider an eyesore. 📍 Map D2

3 Milsons Point

Nestled beneath the Harbour Bridge is a tiny suburb best known for its fun fair. Luna Park (see p56), which is based on New York's Coney Island. Luna

Crowds at Luna Park, Milsons Point

Park's famous laughing clown face set between two Art Deco towers, although remodelled several times over the years, has continuously overlooked the harbour since 1935. The park is built upon a former Sydney Harbour Bridge construction wharf and workshops. Beside the park is the North Sydney Olympic Pool (see p49) which opened in 1936. 📍 Map D2

4 North Sydney

In 1932 John Bradfield (see p12) predicted that, with the opening of the Harbour Bridge, North Sydney and Mosman would merge into a second Brooklyn. He was certainly on the money regarding North Sydney's development, as indicated by the area's many skyscrapers. Sydney's second CBD is home to major Australian banking, finance and insurance giants. Its attractions include a small museum, chapel and tomb dedicated to the memory and works of Mary MacKillop (1842–1909), who became Australia's first saint in 2010.

Apartments at Kirribilli

5 Kirribilli Kirribilli is Australia's most densely populated suburb. But it is better known for two residences that occupy its tip: Admiralty House (1843) and neighbouring Kirribilli House (1855). The former was the residence of the Commander of the British Royal Navy, and is now the Sydney residence of the Governor General, the Queen's representative in Australia. The latter is the official Sydney residence of the Australian Prime Minister. The Gothic Kirribilli House has one of the best views in Australia. 📍 Map D2

6 Neutral Bay & Cremorne Neutral Bay was named by Governor Phillip, who ordered that all foreign ships entering Sydney Harbour anchor here. The area includes Careening Cove, so named because ships were laid on their sides here for refitting. Now this tranquil bay is home to the Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron, the Ensemble Theatre (see p65), and the Sydney Flying Squadron. May Gibbs' (see p40) residence, Nutcote, is on the eastern slope. Further east is Cremorne, a long, narrow peninsula with a popular harbourside reserve. 📍 Map D1

7 Mosman & Balmoral Mosman Bay was named after Archibald Mosman, who established a whaling business nearby in 1830. The suburb is best known for Taronga Zoo (see p32–3) and Bradleys Head (see p50). Lieutenant William Bradley arrived with the First Fleet and later served in the Napoleonic Wars, before he was found guilty of fraud and exiled to France in 1814. Headland Park, unites the former military lands at Chowder Bay, Georges Heights and Middle Head, offers harbourside walking tracks and several restaurants. Balmoral (see p48) has three beaches, including Chinaman's Beach. 📍 Map F1

8 Middle Harbour The entrance to the northern arm of the harbour is marked by Middle Head and Dobroyd Head. North of Chinaman's Beach is the Spit Bridge, which can be raised allowing boats to pass beneath. Castlecrag, northwest of the Spit Bridge, was home for a period to Walter Burley Griffin (1876–1937), the US architect who designed Australia's capital, Canberra. Much of Middle Harbour's shoreline is parkland, with calm waters perfect for kayaking (see p54). To the north is Garigal National Park (see p50). 📍 Map T3

Krishnamurti's Amphitheatre

An amphitheatre was built in Balmoral in 1924 by Theosophists who anticipated a Second Coming under their spiritual leader, Jiddu Krishnamurti (1897–1986). This structure was one of several worldwide dedicated to the "World Teacher", who had been discovered as a boy in Madras. Krishnamurti renounced the Theosophists in 1929.

Walking along Manly Beach

9 Manly This peninsula was so named because Governor Phillip felt the Aborigines he met here in 1788 were “manly”. In 1853, businessman Henry Smith purchased 121 ha (300 acres) on the formerly remote peninsula, and set about creating a seaside pleasure resort. Today, Manly is a very popular and lively destination. Home to lovely beaches, it also features attractions such as Oceanworld Manly (see p118) and October’s Manly Jazz Festival (see p73). Catch the enjoyable harbour ferry ride from Circular Quay and make a full day of it (see p39).

📍 Manly Visitor Information Centre: The Forecourt, Manly Wharf • 9976 1430
 • Open 9am–5pm Mon–Fri, 10am–4pm Sat, Sun & public holidays

10 Manly Scenic Walk A 10-km (6-mile) walk, one of Sydney’s best, traces North Harbour’s shoreline from Manly to the Spit Bridge. The walk passes by coastal heathlands, flat sandy beaches and subtropical rainforest. Highlights on the way include pretty Forty Baskets Beach, rugged Dobroyd Head, the 1911 Grotto Point Lighthouse, Clontarf Beach (see p48), and Aboriginal shell middens east of the Spit Bridge. The NPWS (see p14) offers a useful map of the route, available at the NPWS and Manly Visitor Information Centres.

A Beach Crawl Around Manly

Morning

🕒 Pack a picnic lunch and catch the ferry to Manly Wharf. Cross The Esplanade and follow The Corso down to Manly Beach (see p118). After paying homage to William Gocher (see p39), head south and follow the path around to Cabbage Tree Bay, where you’ll find the delightful Fairy Bower rockpool and Shelly Beach (see p118), both of which are perfect for children. Then take some time out to enjoy a picnic on the protected beach before wading in to wet your feet in the calm water or messing about in the rockpool.

Afternoon

Leave the beach via Bower Street and follow this around to College Street, past the million-dollar mansions overlooking Manly Beach. Turn right into Reddall Street, left into Addison Road, and left again into Darley Road. Head uphill and take a peek over the stone walls at the Former St Patrick’s Seminary (see p118). Continue past the hospital and take the right fork leading into Sydney Harbour National Park (see p14). Pass beneath the sandstone arch and take Collins Beach Road on your right. This winds down through a lovely shaded gully to the Police College. A small path on your right leads to the secluded Collins Beach (see p38), one of Sydney’s hidden secrets. A path at the end of the beach leads to Stuart Street, which takes you back to Manly.

Beyond Sydney

THE REGION SURROUNDING THE CITY OF SYDNEY offers a wealth of natural attractions, historic towns and villages, restaurants with million-dollar views, and endless options for outdoor activities. All regions covered in this section are accessible by public transport, but hiring a car will give you far greater flexibility. To the north of Sydney is Ku-ring-gai Chase National Park, the Hawkesbury River, the Central Coast and Hunter Valley. To the west are the famous Blue Mountains and historic Parramatta and Windsor, while to the south is the gorgeous Royal National Park and the Southern Highlands. All are only a day's trip away from the city centre, but try combining neighbouring attractions into an overnight or weekend trip, for each area offers a diverse and unique set of attractions. Accommodation options range from luxury guesthouses in the Blue Mountains to houseboats on the Hawkesbury River to beach campsites at the Royal National Park.

1 Blue Mountains

These World Heritage-listed mountains are named for their constant bluish haze, the result of evaporating eucalyptus oil. The lovely mountains offer numerous bushwalks and plenty of natural attractions, including the Three Sisters, the Jenolan Caves and Wentworth Falls (see p126). When the explorers Gregory Blaxland, William Lawson and WC Wentworth (see p37), crossed the 1,100-m (3,600-ft) range in 1813, they opened up the continent's grassland interior to white settlement. The main township of Katoomba (see p128) is about 107 km (56 miles) west of Sydney.

2 Hunter Valley

Grapes have been grown in this region since the 1830s. Now there are more than 60 vineyards and countless providers producing condiments, cheese and other gourmet delicacies; some also contain restaurants or cafés. Most of the wineries surround Pokolbin and neighbouring Cessnock, which is the regional township closest to Sydney. Beautiful Hunter Valley is also a popular area for outdoor activities such as cycling, golf, horseriding and hot air ballooning. Numerous tour operators in Sydney offer attractive day, overnight and weekend packages to the area.

3 Central Coast

The coast from Broken Bay (see p122) to Newcastle offers glorious ocean beaches, national parks and several lakes and waterways. The main regional town is Gosford, at the head of Brisbane Water. This large waterway runs out to Broken Bay past Woy Woy and the pleasant townships of Hardy's Bay in Killcare, Pretty Beach and Wagstaffe. Behind Wagstaffe is Bouddi National Park (see p127), which extends north to pleasant McMaster's Beach. Pearl Beach (see p128) and the tiny fishing village of Patonga, surrounded by Brisbane Water National Park (see p127), overlook Broken Bay. Map U1

4 Hawkesbury River

This broad river runs from Windsor (see p124) in the west to Broken Bay (see p122) in the east, passing massive sandstone escarpments, historic riverside towns, national parks, mangrove islands, fishing villages and holiday homes, as well as the spectacular Berowa Waters and Cowan Creek (see p128) coves and Pittwater (see p122). Berowa Waters is home to the famous Berowa Waters Inn. Cowan Creek peters out near pretty Bobbin Head. Although parts of the river are popular with water-skiers, it's actually best enjoyed at a leisurely pace. Map U1

5 Pittwater & Broken Bay

Pittwater is a long, slender waterway running from Newport to Palm Beach (see p48), Ku-ring-gai Chase National Park and Broken Bay. Exclusive houses, private wharves and public marinas populate its eastern shoreline. Housing on the western shoreline thins out as you head north, until you reach Ku-ring-gai Chase National Park, north of isolated Towlers Bay and exclusive Scotland Island. Pittwater's sheltered waters have long been a favourite haunt with yachties. Broken Bay is a beautiful, wide and sometimes wild expanse of water dominated by Lion Island, an uninhabited rocky outcrop. 📍 Map U1

6 Ku-ring-gai Chase National Park

Bounded by the Hawkesbury River to the north and Pittwater to the east, this gorgeous native bushland is a bushwalker's and kayaker's delight. There are numerous walking trails, picnic areas, The Basin campsite, lookouts, hundreds of Aboriginal rock art sites, secluded beaches, a tucked-away restaurant overlooking the water at Cottage Point and marinas at Akuna Bay and Bobbin Head. Cycling and horseriding are allowed in certain sections of the park. Flora and fauna highlights include banksias, waratahs, Sydney red gums, wallabies, flying foxes, pelicans, platypus, blue-tongued lizards, cockatoos and parrots. The information centre runs activities and provides maps and useful tips. 📍 Map T1

7 Northern Beaches

This stretch of stunning ocean beaches runs from Manly to Barrenjoey Head. Palm Beach (see p48) is a haven for Sydney millionaires, as well as being the outdoor location for the popular TV soap opera Home and Away. The Barrenjoey Lighthouse overlooks Broken Bay, the Central Coast and the Hawkesbury River (see p121). Behind Palm Beach lies lovely Pittwater. 📍 Map U1

8 Parramatta

Parramatta is part of Greater Sydney, just 20 km (13 miles) west of the city centre and easily accessible by the suburban train network. The fertile soil found here in the 1780s spared the fledgling colony from probable starvation and spawned Sydney's original satellite township. It was a rural retreat for Governor Phillip, who built a cottage here in 1790. Old Government House (see p125), which replaced Phillip's cottage in 1799, is one of Sydney's most historic sites. Other highlights include Experiment Farm Cottage, Elizabeth Farm, Hambledon Cottage (see pp124–5) and Australia's oldest cemetery, St John's. 📍 Map S3 • St John's Cemetery: O'Connell St, Parramatta

9 Royal National Park

Proclaimed in 1879, this is Australia's oldest national park and the world's second oldest. The 15,074-ha (37,248-acre) park is 32 km (19 miles) south of Sydney. Here you'll find subtropical rainforests, deep valleys, cycle and walking trails, rugged ocean beaches, sandstone clifftops, heathlands, mangroves and inland lagoons. There are several picnic- and campgrounds, and if you're lucky you could spy a swamp wallaby, a satin bowerbird, a pied oystercatcher or the endangered tiger quoll. A tram from Loftus Station connects with the visitors centre on Sundays and public holidays.

📍 Map S6 • Visitors Centre: Farnell Ave, Audley Heights • 9542 0648 • Open 9:30am–4:30pm Mon–Fri, 8:30am–4:30pm Sat–Sun and public holidays

10 Southern Highlands

The coastal hinterland and the city of Wollongong, one or two hours south of Sydney, is a popular weekend getaway destination. With no shortage of antiques and crafts shops, galleries, B&Bs, English-style pubs, ivy-clad Georgian buildings and cottage gardens, this region is reminiscent of the English countryside. Since 1993, a major attraction has been Bundanon, the former estate and studio of artist Arthur Boyd, who bequeathed his property to the nation. Other popular attractions include the historic townships of Bowral (see p125), Berrima, Kiama (see p127), Berry and Kangaroo Valley. The movie Babe was filmed in nearby Robertson.

A Scenic Drive by Hawkesbury River

Morning

📍 Head north across the Harbour Bridge and follow the signs to Windsor (see p124). After a pit stop at the 1815 Macquarie Arms Hotel on George Street, backtrack to Pitt Town Road and follow this northwards. It becomes Cattai Road and then the Wisemans Ferry Road, passing through farmland and bush before dropping down to Wisemans Ferry on the Hawkesbury River (see p121). Take the southern ferry across the Hawkesbury and follow the incredibly scenic road that tracks the Macdonald River as far as St Albans (see p124), where you can enjoy lunch at the 1848 Settlers Arms Inn.

Afternoon

📍 Head back towards Wisemans Ferry along the other side of the Macdonald River until it meets the Hawkesbury River. Follow the river beneath its sandstone escarpments and through the isolated riverside townships of Gunderman and Spencer before climbing up through the forest to Central Mangrove. Drop down to Calga via Peats Ridge and take the Old Pacific Highway south to the Hawkesbury again. Cross the river and take the turnoff to the small fishing and boating township of Brooklyn. Enjoy an ale at the Anglers Rest Hotel or take a 15-minute ferry trip across to Dangar Island's idyllic Island Shop for homemade cake and coffee over-looking the water.

TOP 10 Historic Sites & Townships

1 Windsor
Governor Macquarie established five towns in 1810 on the fertile land around the upper Hawkesbury River, one of which was Windsor, now a weekend tourist haven. The town's wonderful Colonial buildings include one of Australia's oldest pubs, the 1815 Macquarie Arms Hotel, as well as the 1823 St Mathew's Anglican Church and Rectory, designed by Francis Greenway (see p23).

2 Rouse Hill House and Farm
Richard Rouse (1774–1852), Superintendent of Public Works and Convicts at Parramatta, once occupied this estate in Western Sydney and was succeeded by seven generations of descendants. The 1813 Historic Houses Trust property features a Georgian residence and gardens. The furniture dates from the 1830s to the 1960s.

The highlight of this quaint historical village is the charming Settlers Arms Inn. Built by convict labour between 1836 and 1848, this National Trust-classified pub overlooks the Macdonald River and offers good food and accommodation. 📍 Settlers Arms Inn: 1 Wharf St • www.settlersarms.com.au

4 Experiment Farm Cottage
Emancipated convicts James and Elizabeth Ruse established Australia's first self-sufficient farm in 1789. In the colony's first land grant, Governor Phillip gave them a further 12 ha (30 acres) for their efforts. The charming Colonial bungalow was built by the farm's next owner, the surgeon John Harris. The property is owned by the National Trust. 📍 Map S4 • 9 Ruse St, Harris Park • 9635 5655 • Open 10:30am–3:30pm Tue–Fri (from 11am Sat–Sun) • Adm • www.nsw.nationaltrust.org.au

5 Elizabeth Farm
Built by John and Elizabeth Macarthur (see p37), this 1793 estate was once an important social, political and cultural centre. The farm's cottage is the oldest surviving building in Australia, and is carefully furnished with reproductions of the original interiors. 📍 Map S4 • 70 Alice St, Rosehill • 9635 9488 • Open 9:30am–4pm Fri–Sun • Adm • www.hht.net.au

7 Old Government House

Overlooking the Parramatta River, this distinguished plastered brick residence (see p39) is located on 105 ha (260 acres) of parkland. Australia's oldest public building, it was built by Governors Hunter and Macquarie between 1799 and 1818. The porch is credited to Francis Greenway. The interior faithfully reflects the Macquaries' era, and houses one of Australia's finest collections of 19th-century furniture. Tours explore the people who lived here as well as the eras they lived in. www.nsw.nationaltrust.org.au

8 Rock Art in Ku-ring-gai Chase National Park

Prior to white settlement, the area from Broken Bay to Sydney Harbour was inhabited by the Guringai people. However, by the 1840s, most had been wiped out by smallpox or driven away. Over 800 sites record the Aboriginal culture and their bond with the land, including rock engravings, axe-grinding grooves, burial sites, cave shelters, middens (sea-shell mounds) and ochre hand stencils. Map T1

9 Norman Lindsay Gallery

Artist and writer Norman Lindsay (1879–1969), much loved for his 1918 classic children's book The Magic Pudding and his paintings and sculptures of satyrs, nymphs and sirens, occupied this Blue Mountains property from 1912 until his death. The National Trust property is now a museum and gallery with an extensive collection of Lindsay's work, including novels, watercolours and sculptures. 14 Norman Lindsay Crescent, Faulconbridge • 4751 1067 • Open 10am–4pm daily • Adm • www.normanlindsay.com.au

10 Bowral

The Southern Highlands' main town began life in the 1860s when John Oxley, an early Colonial explorer, subdivided his land grant and a small township emerged. Bowral has an arty, old-world feel. It is probably best known as the former home of the famous cricketer Sir Donald Bradman (see p92). The Bradman Museum honours the game and its greatest batsman, while the Bradman Walk is a self-guided tour of the historical sites in the town. 3 Three Sisters
 The most popular landmark of the Blue Mountains is this spectacular rock formation, which derives its name from an Aboriginal Dreamtime legend. The story relates that the leader of the Gundungurra people, concerned for the safety of his three beautiful daughters, turned them into stone to protect them from enemies but died before being able to reverse his spell. The Three Sisters stand at the entrance to the long climb into Jamison Valley.

4 Wentworth Falls
 These impressive 300-m (1,082-ft) falls mark the start of some of the Blue Mountains' most challenging walking trails down to neighbouring Jamison Valley. The Wentworth Falls Reserve lies near the village of Wentworth, named for one of the first Europeans to explore the region (see p37).

5 Kiama Blowhole
A large fishing and resort town, Kiama is one of the most attractive coastal spots south of Sydney. Discovered by explorer George Bass in 1797, this 25-m (82-ft) blowhole originates in a natural fault in the cliffs. It erupts whenever a wave hits with enough force, which can be every few minutes. Water can be thrown as high as 60 m (200 ft).

6 Illawarra Coast
A massive sandstone escarpment traces the coastline south of Royal National Park and north of Wollongong. A string of small towns nestled beneath the escarpment all offer spectacular ocean views.

7 Mount Tomah Botanic Gardens
Covering 28 ha (60 acres), these alpine gardens are located on a summit of the Blue Mountains. The rich basalt soil lies 1,000 m (3,281 ft) above sea level. Along with stunning views, the gardens feature an excellent collection of cool-climate plants. To reach the gardens, follow the Botanists' Way trail into the Blue Mountains.

8 Bouddi National Park
With clifftop walks overlooking the ocean and Broken Bay, secluded beaches, heathlands and banksia forests, this tiny coastal park is a gem. It extends from Box Head to McMaster's Beach on the Central Coast (see p121), and offers good bushwalking trails and camping facilities. ☎ NPWS: 207 Albany St North, Gosford • 4320 4200

9 Wollemi National Park
This scenic national park is the largest wilderness area in NSW at 492,976 ha (1,217,650 acres). The rugged terrain is composed of a maze of canyons and gorges that traverse rainforested mountains. Other features include riverside beaches, whitewater rafting and camping.

10 Brisbane Water National Park
Aboriginal rock art and spring wildflowers are the highlights of this 12,000-ha (39,640-acre) park overlooking Broken Bay and the Hawkesbury River. There are great views over the Hawkesbury from the path leading from Pearl Beach to tiny Patonga, accessible by ferry from Palm Beach (see p48). ☎ Map U1

TOP 10 Planning Your Trip

1 When to Go

Late spring (October–November) and early autumn (March–April) are the best times to visit Sydney. The days are warm and the evenings mild. Sydney's winters are cool to mild, but summer can be hot and unbearably humid with the occasional downpour.

2 What to Bring

Sydney fashion is casual, so a selection of light mix-and-match clothing should suffice. Be sure to pack beach gear and walking shoes.

3 How Long to Stay

One week will allow you to cover all the top 10 sights, in two weeks you'll be able to explore the Around Town section, and three weeks will be enough time to experience the national parks and outlying regions.

4 Media

Sydney has three major dailies. The Sydney Morning Herald, The Daily Telegraph and The Australian, all of which have websites.

5 Websites

The New South Wales (NSW) government portal is an informative site, and its Culture and Recreation section is useful for planning a holiday, as is the Tourism New South Wales' website section on Sydney. The Australian Tourist Commission site provides information on various events and lists worldwide Australian travel agencies.

6 Passports & Visas

All foreign visitors to Australia must have a valid passport. If you are a New Zealander you will receive an electronic visa. If you are from any other country, you will require an entry visa or ETA (Electronic Travel Authority). Visa forms are available from travel agencies and the Australian government's immigration website.

7 Australian Consulates & Embassies

Australian consulates, embassies and missions are found in almost every country's capital city. They can provide information about Sydney and answer questions regarding visas. To locate the consulate in your city, visit the site listed under "Consulates".

8 Insurance

Although travel in Australia is generally straightforward, and hospitals won't turn you away if you're uninsured, it's always best to be well insured when travelling. Before any challenging outdoor activity, read the fine print to ensure that you will be covered in emergency.

9 Driver's Licenses

Drivers with a valid overseas license in English can drive in Australia. Carry your license at all times if you are driving. Seatbelts are compulsory.

10 Customs

Customs regulations are strictly enforced and prohibit the unauthorised import of goods made from plant or animal products, weapons or firearms, protected wildlife, amounts exceeding $10,000 and non-prescription drugs. If you require medication, carry your prescription.

TOP 10 Getting To Sydney

1 Kingsford-Smith International Airport

Sydney's only international airport is 9 km (5.6 miles) south of the city centre. All domestic flights also arrive and depart from here. The international (T1) and domestic terminals (T2 and T3) are far apart, so you'll need to catch a taxi, bus or train to travel between them. Airport Link takes 2 minutes, but first check if your airline offers a free shuttle.

2 Airport Link

Trains provide a fast and easy way to get into the city, particularly at peak hour when traffic is heavy. The trip takes only 13 minutes. Use the elevators to get to the stations, directly below the terminals.

3 Airport Buses & Shuttles

Though very cheap, buses are only a good option if you are heading to Randwick, Coogee or Bondi Junction. Private shuttles such as Super-shuttle and Sydney Airporter are more expensive, but can be booked for specific times and will take you right to your destination.

4 Help Desks

Can't make up your mind where to go or what to do next? Visit the NSW Tourism Information Desks at the airport and at Central Station.

5 Taxis

A taxi (see p134) from T1 to the CBD costs about $30. There are ranks outside each terminal. A $2.50 toll has to be paid if you take a taxi from any of these. Taxi queues are longest on weekdays at 7–9am and 5–7pm, the airport's peak hours.

6 Car Hire

Car companies (see p134), have desks at the airport. Hiring a small car will cost $40–$80 per day, so it's advisable to shop around.

7 Central Station

All interstate and regional trains terminate on the upper level of this station. Many coach services drop passengers here, at the Sydney Coach Terminal. Suburban train services run from the lower level, buses to the eastern suburbs leave from Eddy Avenue, and those to the inner-west suburbs from nearby Railway Square. There is a taxi rank at the upper level entrance.

8 Passenger Ship Terminals

Both passenger ports, the Overseas Passenger Terminal (OPT) at West Circular Quay and Wharf 5 at Darling Harbour, are excellent places to arrive, centrally located and close to many hotels. The OPT is spectacular as it faces the Opera House.

9 Left Luggage

Due to security policies, lockers are not available at the airport. Luggage can be left in the baggage storage areas of the arrivals hall in each terminal. There are no left luggage facilities at Central Station or at the ports.

10 Lost Property

Collect lost property from Sydney Airport Reception at T1. Contact your airline if your luggage goes missing or is left on the baggage carousel, or if you lose an item in T2 or T3. Items lost on a train or at a station can be found at Cityrail's lost property office at Central Station.

TOP 10 Getting Around

1 Buses

Bus services run frequently and are a good, cheap way to get around, although traffic can be very heavy at rush hour. Routes with an "L," "E" or "X" indicate services that travel a greater distance between stops. Buy your ticket before boarding buses in the city. Pre-pay tickets are sold at kiosks, convenience stores and newsagents. You can buy single- or multi-trip tickets.

2 Trains

Trains to most areas leave from the Town Hall and Central stations. Services run frequently from 6am until after midnight.

3 Ferries

Sydney Ferries (see pp16–17) run services from Circular Quay to 39 wharves. The 30-minute ride from Circular Quay to Manly is extra special, but those who find it too long can catch the Fast Ferry. Though not cheap, ferries are a great way to see Sydney and to experience the harbour.

4 Light Rail

A pleasant and fast way to get around, this is easily the best direct transport from the CBD to the Fish Market.

5 Monorail

Expensive (there is a flat price for a single trip whether you go one stop or the whole loop), the monorail snakes through Sydney's CBD in a relatively small loop taking in the Galleries Victoria, city centre, Darling Harbour, Powerhouse Museum, Chinatown and World Square. The trains depart every 5 minutes. Get a day pass to hop on and off to explore the sights.

6 Taxis

Make bookings if you want to arrive at an exact time, especially at peak hours and on weekend nights. If drivers don't know the way, you are entitled to have them turn off the meter while they look up the street directory. Fares are regulated and cost more after 10pm. Smoking is not allowed and a driver may refuse to take you if you are drunk.

7 Water Taxis

Running from most piers, they'll pick you up from anywhere they can navigate. Prices vary, but expect to pay a flagfall of about $45 and an additional cost per person. Look for them at Circular Quay, or call to book one. Confirm the price before you board.

8 Explorer Buses

Great value tickets allow you to get on and off the buses at will, and frequent services run the loop. A two-day twin ticket allows you to travel on both Sydney and Bondi Explorers.

9 Car Hire

While the public transport network is excellent, having a car in Sydney makes getting around easy, particularly in the outer suburbs.

10 Bicycles

There are some cycle lanes in Sydney but the roads are very crowded. Download a cycle map and hire a bike for a day or week from Cheeky Monkey or Woollys Wheels.

TOP 10 Sources of Information

1 Tourist Offices

The Sydney Visitors Centre at The Rocks (see p140) and Darling Harbour offer information and maps. You'll find City Host information kiosks at Circular Quay, Sydney Square and Martin Place. The Visitors Centre at Sydney Airport handles accommodation and travel bookings.

2 Embassies & Consulates

Several nations have consulates in Sydney, which can be located in the Yellow Pages telephone directory.

3 Disabled Travellers

Travellers with disabilities will find the Access Foundation's site an excellent resource for news, entertainment, travel, accommodation, transport and links to community resources.

4 Gay & Lesbian Travellers

The Gay and Lesbian Tourism site provides accommodation information, while the Sydney Star Observer has news and entertainment listings. Lesbians on the Loose has information, contacts and classifieds.

5 Travelling with Children

Sydney's Child is a free monthly magazine with tips for parents. You can pick one up at many chemists, tourist venues and child-friendly facilities like public pools. Many venues also host kids' programmes.

6 Older Travellers

The Senior Card and Seniors Information Service sites offer event listings, news and links to relevant organisations. Get Up and Go magazine contains information on travel agencies.

7 Websites

The City of Sydney, Tourism NSW and City Search websites cover sports, festivals, music, tours, the arts and more.

8 Radio & TV

Five free TV stations include SBS and ABC. Triple J (105.7 FM) is an alternative music station, and 2SER FM (107.3) and FBI FM (94.5) are also worth checking out. 702 ABC (702 AM) serves up current affairs and drive-time formats while Radio National (576 AM) presents current affairs, music and culture.

9 Free Publications & Listings

City Weekly and 9 to 5 are weekly newspapers covering entertainment and leisure. The Sydney Morning Herald's Metro section offers information on Sydney events.

10 Bookshops & Café Windows

Many independent bookshops and cafés

have noticeboards with local advertisements, especially around Glebe Point Road, Crown Street, King Street and Campbell Parade.

TOP 10 Banking & Communications

1 Money, Taxes & Refunds

The Australian dollar is divided into 100 cents. There are $5, $10, $20, $50 and $100 plastic notes. A 10 percent tax is levied on most goods and services (GST), but tourists may be entitled to refunds from Customs through the Tourist Refund Scheme (TRS). Be sure to ask for a "tax invoice" for purchases over $300, just in case.

2 Banks & Post Offices

Most banks are open from 9:30/10am–4/5pm Monday to Friday. Australia Post branch hours vary, but most are open from 9am–5pm Monday to Friday. The GPO is open from 8:15am–5:30pm Monday to Friday and 10am–2pm Saturday. Poste Restante mail should be addressed to the GPO, 1 Martin Place, Sydney 2000.

3 Public Holidays

Banks, post offices and most government agencies are closed on these public holidays: New Year's Day, Australia Day (26 January), Good Friday and Easter Monday, Anzac Day (25 April), Queen's Birthday (2nd Monday in June), Bank Holiday (1st Monday in August), Labour Day (1st Monday in October), Christmas Day and Boxing Day (26 December). The summer school break extends from late December to late January. There are usually two-week breaks in April, July and October.

4 Currency Exchange

Bureaux de change at the airport open between 5am and 6am and close between 9:45pm and 11pm daily. There are numerous bureaux de change in the CBD.

5 Traveller's Cheques

Traveller's cheques are still accepted by major hotels, banks and the like, but personal cheques from foreign accounts are not.

6 ATMs

Most ATMs are located outside banks, and can also be found in many pubs, clubs and some convenience stores. If your bank's debit card is linked to an international system such as Cirrus, you can use your card at retail outlets. Make sure your PIN applies to Australian ATMs.

7 Credit Cards

MasterCard and Visa are the two major credit cards in Australia; some establishments also accept American Express and Diners Club. Cash advances against your credit card are also possible. In most cases you'll need a credit card to hire a car in Sydney.

8 Telephones

Public telephones accept coins, phone cards and sometimes credit cards. A local call costs 40 cents. Phone cards are available at newsagents and convenience stores; make sure the card allows international calls before buying one. You may be able to use a pre-paid SIM card in your own mobile phone.

9 Internet Access

Most hotels are set up to allow you to log on to the net. There is also no shortage of Internet cafés across the city.

10 Tipping

While tipping is not compulsory, it is always appreciated – 10 per cent of the total bill is appropriate for good service, while cafés have a tip jar at the counter. It is common to round up taxi fares, and hotel staff may expect a gratuity.

TOP 10 Security & Health

1 Theft

Sydney is a safe destination, but the usual "Big City" rules apply. Don't leave valuables in cars, avoid ATMs late at night, and be alert to pickpockets at train stations. Baggage storage is available at the airport, and lockers at the State Library, most swimming pools and at Bondi and Manly.

2 Dangerous Areas

It's sensible to avoid parks, barren areas and the back-streets of Kings Cross late at night. If you're travelling on a train alone at night, sit near the guard's compartment (marked by a blue light).

3 Hospitals & Medical Centres

Sydney Hospital, St Vincent's Hospital, RPA Hospital and the Sydney Children's Hospital Randwick are the most central facilities that accept emergency admissions. If you require an ambulance, dial 000. Make sure your travel insurance covers ambulance fees, which can be expensive.

4 Pharmacies

Pharmacies are found all over Sydney. In most suburbs they open on weekends as well as weekdays. It's advisable to carry your prescription if you require regular medication.

5 Women Travellers

Sydney can be "blokey" (macho), but women travellers mostly find it a relaxed and casual city. The WIRS (Women's Information and Referral Service) has information on women's services and organisations. The Rape Crisis Centre can also help in an emergency.

6 Things that Bite & Sting

Sydneysiders are obsessed with creatures that bite and sting, such as sharks and funnel-web spiders, but you'd be unlikely to encounter them. Blowflies and "muzzies" can be annoying in summer, but they don't carry malaria. Do wear sturdy shoes and long trousers if walking in bushland.

7 Ticks

Bush ticks are small insects that crawl from foliage and burrow into your skin; check your scalp, neck and ankles if you have been bushwalking. Sodium bicarbonate can help to remove ticks.

8 Sunburn

Take precautions against the strong Australian sun, for even overcast days can have a high UV rating. When swimming or sailing, keep in mind that water amplifies the intensity of UV rays.

9 Swimming

Unless an experienced open-water swimmer, stick to beaches patrolled by lifeguards. Always swim between the red and yellow flags. If caught in an undertow (see p138), don't try swimming against the current; wait until help arrives or the rip peters out.

10 Bushfires

Bushfires are part of Sydney life in the bushy outer suburbs. "Total Fire Ban" days are often declared in summer. If you're in trouble, don't try to outrun the fire: seek shelter immediately to avoid the most common cause of death, which is radiant heat.

TOP 10 Things to Avoid

1 Swimming Outside the Flags

Although Sydney beaches are idyllic, their unpredictable rips (undertows) can be hazardous. Always swim between the flags and ensure that you are being watched by a lifeguard. If you get into trouble, try to relax and raise an arm to alert the lifeguards.

2 Bushwalking Alone

Bushwalking is a great way to see a different part of the city, but never go alone. Let someone know where you are going and your expected time of return. Stick to walking tracks, take a map, mobile phone, plenty of water and snacks.

3 Age Restrictions

Age restrictions apply to entry to licensed premises and gambling venues, 18 years in both instances. Cigarettes are not sold to under 18-year olds and there are stiff penalties if caught buying for minors. There are also heavy penalties if caught with illicit drugs.

4 Walking into Traffic

If you're fresh off the plane from Los Angeles or New York and feeling a little jetlagged, look both ways before stepping off the pavement (sidewalk): Australian cars drive on the left-hand side of the road, not the right.

5 Beggars & the Homeless

Like any big city, Sydney has its share of homeless beggars, most of whom present no danger. Some of them are registered street vendors of The Big Issue; purchase a copy if you'd like to support those trying to get back on their feet. They get half the proceeds and it's a good read.

6 Drink Driving

Drink driving is a problem in Australia and police are equipped to test drivers for alcohol. The legal limit is 0.05 in NSW. "Booze buses" (police teams with testing equipment) randomly target locations at odd hours. If caught, your car keys will be confiscated and you will face a hefty fine. It's just not worth the risk, so catch a taxi.

7 City Circle Train Stations at Peak Hour

Sydney's central underground railway stations are frantic at peak hour. Not just busy, they can be stiflingly hot, especially in summer. Like all congested city venues they are frequented by pickpockets, so be careful.

8 Arguments with Drunks

Some young local men who have had too much alcohol on a night out can get into arguments that sometimes turn physical. This is not common but it does happen. If you are confronted in this way don't argue back, just walk away.

9 You say Bond-ee, I say Bond-eye

North Americans and other English-speakers are particularly prone to stumbling into this minefield. Listen carefully to local pronunciation and follow suit – or just ask. Bondi is pronounced "Bond-eye", not "Bond-ee". For some reason Sydneysiders find this mistake particularly irksome. Some other pronunciation pitfalls include "Mel-born" instead of "Mel-bun" for Melbourne, and "Coo-gee" instead of "Could-gee" for Coogee Beach.

10 Bluebottles

Strong winds can bring bluebottles onto beaches: they look like small, clear jellyfish with blue veins and have long stinging tentacles. Their sting is painful but they are only dangerous for people with asthma. Dead bluebottles stranded on the sand can still sting. Avoid swimming near them, don't rub a sting and if no medical attention is available, treat stings with ice packs.

TOP 10 Shopping Tips

1 Trading Hours

Most stores are open daily 9am–5:30pm, with some closing early on Sundays. Late-night shopping on Thursdays sees shops open until 9pm. In areas such as Paddington, Balmain and Double Bay, shops open between 10 and 11am and close at 6pm. Many shops in Chinatown are open until 7pm daily.

2 Sales

While boutiques no longer stick to a firm schedule of sales, department stores have huge sales in January and again in June. There are great bargains, especially on homewares. Sales are usually advertised in newspapers and on TV.

3 GST

A Goods and Services Tax (GST) of ten percent is applied to most items. If you spend more than $300 at any one shop within 28 days of leaving Australia, you are entitled to reclaim the GST. Take your receipts to the booth at Sydney Airport.

4 Payment

All stores accept credit cards, though some claim a surcharge on credit card purchases. Some larger stores, souvenir shops and duty free stores may accept traveller's cheques as long as you have passport identification.

5 Warehouse Outlets

Many local chain stores and manufacturers have warehouse outlets in inner city suburbs such as Alexandria. The best way to check them out is on a day tour. Try Sydney Shopping tours, which has six city pick-up points and includes lunch.

6 Souvenirs

For stuffed koalas, you can't beat the discount shops on Pitt and Park Streets. Most attractions offer quality keepsakes; try the Museum of Sydney (see p42) and Opera House Store (see p81). Buy opals and boomerangs in The Rocks (see p81), swimwear and T-shirts at surf shops (see p94) and sheepskins in the QVB (see p80). Try the weekend market at The Rocks for handmade items.

7 Fashion & Accessories

You'll find high-end designer fashion in Double Bay, Paddington (see p94) and the Westfield Bondi Junction (see p100). A younger crowd shops in The Galleries (see p80), Surry Hills (see p94) and Woollahra for casual and party clothes. Try Newtown (see p106) for alternative and second-hand shops, including Enmore Rd. Find kids' clothes at David Jones (see p81) and WBJ.

8 Design & Homewares

The best of Australian and international design can be found in Surry Hills and Alexandria. A stroll around the streets near Central station will unearth gems. Crown Street between Foveaux and Devonshire is also a great strip (see p94). The Object store (see p44) has a great range of Australian design crafts.

9 Food

The big supermarkets are mostly found in the suburbs, but there is a Woolworths at Town Hall station and a Coles at Wynyard. Delicatessens offer great sandwich fillings, small goods and cheese. David Jones' food hall offers gourmet goodies as well as pre-cooked dinners. Grower's markets, advertised in The Sydney Morning Herald on Tuesdays, are a wonderful way to shop.

10 Going Green

A current campaign to reduce the quantity of plastic bags that end up as landfill has caused shops to introduce many eco-friendly options. Buy a sturdy, reusable green bag – fast becoming trendy – from Coles or Woolworths supermarkets, department stores and even smaller shops, or pack your purchases into your backpack.

Contact Sydney Shopping Tours at 1800 673 709 or www.sydneyshoppingtours.com.au – a day's tour costs $50.

TOP 10 Sydney on a Budget

1 Discount Plane Tickets

There are often cheap tickets to Australia in the low season, from mid-April to end-September. If flying in from elsewhere in Australia, check out the websites of discount air carriers Virgin Blue, Tiger Airways and Jetstar for good deals.

2 Hotel Deals

Look for packages that offer free or very cheap accommodation when you buy your flights. You can also find cheap rates by booking hotels online, or by making week-long reservations (see p142).

3 Youth Hostels

Staying in hostels is not just for backpackers, as most have comfortable double and twin rooms available for modest prices. You'll also benefit from the use of the kitchen, fridge, laundry and lounge areas. Some hostels have swimming pools.

4 Concessions

An International Student Identification Card, available from STA travel agents, will get you a concession entry into most attractions, galleries and museums, but not the concession rate on public transport.

5 Travel Passes

Weekly and day passes for unlimited trips

on buses, trains and ferries can save plenty of money. My Multi 1 weekly pass is great value, particularly if you're planning on making more than two trips on public transport a day. A My Multi 3 pass will even get you to the Blue Mountains by train. However, these passes cannot be used on the monorail and light rail services or at the airport train stations. Every Sunday, Family Funday tickets allow unlimited travel on Government buses, trains and ferries for $2.50 per person. There should be at least one adult and one child in the group.

6 Phone Cards

Convenience stores all over the city sell international calling cards, so shop around for one with good rates. Buy a Telstra phone card to use for local calls.

7 Cheap Eats

Sydney has myriad cheap and cheerful restaurants. The best are often small local diners offering Thai, Chinese, Indian or Lebanese food. To save more money, bring your own wine or beer and stop by a gelateria for an ice cream or gelato dessert.

8 Coupons

There are often vouchers for Sydney's top restaurants among the brochures in high-end hotel lobbies. Look through the racks; you may find offers such as two main courses for the price of one. More coupons may be available at the Sydney Visitors' Centre.

9 Picnics

Buying lunch every day can be expensive. Instead, buy staples such as bread, fruit and cheese and store them in the fridge at your hostel or hotel room. Make a picnic lunch and pack it for the day. Sydney's tap water is good quality, so buy a bottle of water and keep refilling it.

10 Laundromats

Hostels usually have coin-operated washing machines, but if you're staying somewhere without one, avoid the cost of laundering by going to a laundromat to use the coin-operated machines.

TOP 10 Dining Tips

1 Mod Oz

Modern Australian cuisine is generally a fusion of Asian and Eastern flavours with European technique. Experimental Australian chefs draw on the highly multicultural population and a diverse climate that ranges from tropical to cool-region conditions.

2 Menu Jargon

The quest for the exotic generates menus loaded with foreign terms and regional Australian names. Bangalow and Barossa refer to regions; Wagyu and Hiramasa to quality; assiette, confit and panacotta to French and Italian techniques and dishes. Chinese restaurants often have an English and a Chinese menu.

3 Courses

Pre-dinner nibbles are called hors d'oeuvres or canapés. The first course is the entrée, and the second is the main course. These are followed by dessert and coffee, or sometimes by a cheese platter.

4 Dégustation

This French word means to take a small amount into the mouth and test its quality. A Sydney trend, dégustations offer 7–12 small set courses instead of orders from the menu. These courses allow chefs to take advantage of the freshest ingredients and to show off their skills.

5 Bookings

The more expensive the restaurant, the further ahead you'll need to make your reservation. Sydney's top restaurant, the dégustation-only Tetsuya's (see p58), takes bookings three months in advance. Vegetarians and those with special dietary requirements should book at least a day ahead. Some restaurants don't take bookings but will send you to a nearby bar and call you when your table is ready.

6 Tipping

Usual but voluntary, tipping is a way to express your enjoyment of or dissatisfaction with a restaurant meal. If the food and service are of good quality, leave about 10 per cent. You may want to leave more for extraordinary service, and less or no tip if service has been shoddy.

7 Wine

Most expensive restaurants have helpful sommeliers who are experts at matching food and wine, so you can leave the choices up to them. You might tell them that you wish to taste a variety of Australian wines. When buying wine from a bottle shop, be aware that

Australian names refer to the grape variety and not the region. You can take your own wine to some restaurants but you may have to pay a small charge for corkage.

8 Beer

Some types of food are highly spiced and do not go well with most wines. Choosing a beer to go with Thai, Indian and Chinese food is a good option. Good Australian beers include Boag's, Cascade, Hahn Premium, James Squire, Cooper's and Redback.

9 Coffee

The ubiquitous espresso coffee comes in various forms. A flat white is a shot of coffee with milk but no froth while the popular latte has additional milk and is often served in a long glass. Try a macchiato, a shot topped with a burst of froth. Decaf, soy and light milks are common.

10 Dining With Children

Some restaurants specifically cater to kids with dedicated menus. Others will suggest entrée-sized dishes that might appeal to children. The large Chinese and Italian restaurants and places by the beach are usually used to kids running around. Some have paper napkins and provide crayons so that kids can draw on them.

Some restaurants which are not licensed have a policy of BYO, or "bring your own" alcohol; at some others, BYO is optional.

TOP 10 Accommodation Tips

1 Choosing Hotel Locations

Staying at the beach means a refreshing dip is only moments away. Hotels on the fringe of the CBD, especially those with harbour views, are a relaxing option for business travellers. Those with children might avoid areas around Potts Point and Darlinghurst, which necessitate walking through the red light district of Kings Cross.

2 Making Reservations

It is advisable to make reservations. Book well in advance when Sydney is busiest, from mid-December until the beginning of February, during Mardi Gras in early March, and in school holidays – the first two weeks of April, July and October. Reservations can be made via the hotel directly or through your travel agent.

3 Discount Rates

Some hotels offer significant discounts for last minute bookings and walk-ins. Hotel websites sometimes offer great rates. If you are prepared to make a non-refundable booking, you might get as much as a 50 per cent discount on rooms.

4 Longer Stays

Some hotels, particularly hostels, budget and boutique

hotels, reward guests for lengthy stays with reduced weekly rates. Many hostels set a limit of a 14-day stay. Serviced apartments may offer incentives for stays of up to a month.

5 Frequent Flyers

Most airline frequent flyer programmes have lists of hotels where members can accrue points. Existing points can usually be used for room upgrades or special packages. Airline bookings sometimes offer a discount.

6 Water Views

While many hotels are situated at the water's edge, the standard room rate usually applies to a room without a view. Expect to pay a premium of about $50–$100 above the standard rate. You might find better value in the best room of a smaller or lower-rated hotel.

7 Extra Costs

Even the most basic breakfast can be expensive in the large CBD hotels, so head to a nearby café or bakery. Drinks and snacks provided in the minibar are often double their retail cost, so check the prices first. Avoid surcharges on phone calls by using a public phone in the lobby. Other services, such as late checkouts, parking, laundry, Internet access, in-house movies and receiving faxes usually incur a fee.

8 Travelling with Children

Children under 12 usually stay for free using existing bedding. This can be a good arrangement in twin rooms that offer a double and single bed, or in studios that include sofa beds. Where offered, there is a fee of approximately $30 for rollaway beds. Many hotels can arrange interconnecting rooms.

9 Disabled Travellers

Regulations force larger hotels to offer rooms with full disabled access, and some hotels have as many as ten such rooms. The same rules don't apply to small hotels and B&Bs in converted mansions or heritage buildings. It's best to enquire about facilities when making reservations and to check that there is room to manoeuvre a wheelchair.

10 GST

GST (see p139) is charged on hotel rooms and on other services that hotels may provide for you. The tax is usually included in the room rate and will be clearly marked on any accounts. It is not possible to reclaim GST incurred on accommodation.

The Authors

Steve Womersley has lived in Sydney on and off since childhood. He has worked with some of the world's leading travel publishers as a writer and editor and currently lives in country Victoria.

Steve Womersley would like to thank Jane Fuller, Mickey Morelle, Terri Dylan and Terry Harding for their hospitality, Gerry Gallagher, Terry Stuart, Stephanie Holt, Peter Anderson, Rachel Neustein, Loren Polzot and Anita Krivickas for their insider tips, and Sera Jane and Minka for their patience.

Born in Paddington, Rachel Neustein has always lived in inner Sydney and knows all the back alleys and secret spots. She writes about art, fashion, film, food and music for various Australian and international magazines.

Rachel Neustein would like to thank Damien Power, Nell Heard, Alice Addison and David N Reginald.
